ACTION LINE PROBES FOR INVESTORS

BOWL FIRMS FIGHT RUIN

By DAVID SHAW

Two multimillion-dollar WonderBowl bowling alleys in which thousands of Long Beach area residents own stock have asked for federal court assistance in their battle against bankruptcy, The Independent, Press-Telegram

A preliminary inquiry by the state attorney general into shareholder charges that the alleys have defrauded them by siphoning profits into affiliated holdings has been suspended, pending outcome of the court proceedings.

Officials of the two bowling alley corporations. WonderBowl Downey Inc. and WonderBowl Inc. of Anaheim, have previously been investigated-and punished-by three other governmental agencies, the Internal Revenue Service, Securities and Exchange Commission and State Division of Corporations.

AN ACTION LINE probe, prompted by questions from more than 50 local WonderBowl shareholders, disclosed the involvement of the state and federal governments. It also showed that the two WonderBowls filed petitions in U.S. District Court last month asking for temporary relief from creditors while they plan a corporate reorganization designed to avert bankruptcy.

The WonderBowls went to bankruptcy court when the holder of a $716,000 first trust deed on the Anaheim alley and the holder of a $300,000 second trust deed on the Downey alley threatened to foreclose.

In filing reorganization proceedings, the Wonder-Bowls listed assets of approximately $10 million, including $2.7 million in land adjacent to the Anaheim alley, $3 million in land and buildings in Arizona and about $2 million for each bowling alley.

Liabilities totaled $6.4 million, but equalled the assets when the stockholders' equity was added

THE PETITIONS said the companies are "unable to pay their debts as they mature" and are "insolvent except for properties." The assets are "of the nature that their value is not immediately realizeable," the court was told. "If they are liquidated, their value will be greatly diminished and the interests of all parties will be greatly impaired."

Eccause of this, the court sanctioned reorganization proceedings, rather than recommending outright bankruptcy. If the companies filed bankruptcy, stockholders would receive no money until all creditors were paid.

The court, under Chapter 10 of the Federal Bankruptcy Act, issued a temporary restraining order against all creditors, pending the reorganization, and appointed A.

J. Buhm as trustee of the companies.
Buhm will assess the assets and liabilities of the WonderBowls-and of the alleys' wholly owned subsidiary, WonderFair Stores of Arizona-and propose a reorganiza-

TO BE IMPLEMENTED, the reorganization would have to be approved by the court and by a majority of the 3,000 WonderBowl Anaheim stockholders and the 4,000 WonderBowl Downey stockholders.

chard Speck, who bears the tattoo "Born to Raise Hell," was found guilty Saturday for slaughtering eight nurses. The jury said "We fix his punishment at death."

The jury of seven men and five women took only 50 minutes and one ballot to decide that the 25-year-old drifter seaman from Dallas should die in Illinois' electric chair for the systematic massacre of the nurses in their Chicago dormitory apartment last July

It was expected Circuit Court Judge Herbert C. Paschen would go through the formality of sentencing Speck and naming his exe-cution date after the lean defendant is whisked back to Chicago, a town which had been adjudged too hot to give Speck a fair trial.

Ky Makes Surge for Viet Presidency

Combined News Services

Premier Nguyen Coa Ky is now reported to be a solid favorite among military men for president of South Vietnam in the naflonal election Sept. 1.

Political analysts said Saturday there has been a definite shift of support in military circles over the last two weeks toward Ky, who still commands South Vietnam's air force, and away from Chief of State Nguyen Van Thieu, 43, a lieutenant general.

No official announcement is expected until next month. For the record, Ky. continues to insists he does not want the presidency and will seek it only if Thien declines to run. Informed sources said that the matter is now largely out of Thieu's hands, though not all the generals back Ky.

Thieu underwent an operation last week for ap-pendicitis. While he was hospitalized, reports circulated that he was pondering whether to run for the senate or try to bring back Lt. Gen. Duong Van (Big) Minh to help him campaing for Buhm told The Independent, Press-Telegram he expects to recommend sale of the 21 acres adjacent to the Anaheim alley (at Katella Avenue and West Boulevard) in his initial report to the court.

"I have a man in Arizona evaluating the land there, too," he said. "Liquidation of the non-essential land holdings will probably be necessary to save the company—that and a reorganization that would bring all Mr. Fallon's interests into one corporation."

BUHM ESTIMATES it will be at least four months before he will be able to make specific reorganization recommendations, so it will be at least that long before the state attorney general will resume the inquiry he started last year at the request of shareholders.

Attorney General Thomas Lynch told The Independent, Press-Telegram he opened the "preliminary inquiry" when Stephen King, a Los Angeles attorney representing the WonderBowl "Shareholders Protective Committee," told him the companies had not issued annual financial reports in 1965 and 1966.

Lynch said his office has been looking into the Won-by a maximum fine of $1,000).

"We've also started checking on Mr. King's allegations that WonderBowl siphoned profits into other holdings," Lynch said.

"We probably won't take any action until after the bankruptcy proceedings. Then we'll resume our inquiry and, if necessary, start a formal investigation," he said.

IF LYNCH DOES act against WonderBowl, it will mark the fourth major punitive measure taken against Fallon or his holdings by a government agency in six years.

The Internal Revenue Service seized the two bowling alleys-and WonderBowl Norwalk-last June for nonpayment of $125,000 in back income taxes. Fallon redeemed the alleys five weeks later, sold the Norwalk alley for $1.6 million (he bought it in 1964 for $1.4 million) and, in December, leased the Downey and Anaheim alleys to Brunswick Corp., to help pay off back debts to that concern for thousands of dollars worth of equipment.

Almost exactly two years before the IRS action, the U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission revoked Fallon's stock broker's license. He was accused of "wilfully relation" feeded on the formula for the way accused on the feeder of the way accused on the feeder of the f violating" federal anti-fraud laws, selling "unseasoned and speculative" stock while "insolvent" and "placing customers in a position where they were asked to make hasty decisions to buy securities on the basis of unsubstantiated, flamboyant, untrue and misleading representations."

FALLON, WHO DID not appear at the SEC hearings, was represented at one session by his altorney. The attorney requested Fallon's license he voluntarily withdrawn. The SEC refused, and, instead, invoked the license Fallon held as president and sole shareholder of Standard Securities Corp. and American-International Securities Inc., the companies that sold stock in WonderBowl.

Fallon's securities firms also sold stock in Filmaster Inc., a company in which he owned 22 per cent, after it merged in 1959 with Wonder Bowl Compton (which never got off the ground).

Filmaster produced several major television programs, including "Gunsmoke" and "Have Gun, Will Travel," but the State Division of Corporations, in 1961. accused Filmaster of implying it owned the TV programs, and ordered the company to give refunds to any stockholders demanding their money back.

Scores of Long Beach area residents owned stock in Filmaster. Fallon says only 2 to 3 per cent of all sharehold-

The reports of smallscale Delta fighting were the only accounts of ground action. U.S. B52 bombers made two raids in northern provinces of South Vietnam, and Air Force and Navy pilots took advantage of improved weather to step up attacks on North Vietnamese targets.

To the north, U.S. Marines cleared jungles with bulldozers Saturday south of the demilitarized zone in a project to compliment Premier Nguyen Cao Ky's plan for a Little Maginot Line. The Americans were reported skeptical of the project to build a fortified strip against any invasion attempt from the north.

OLD GLORY UP IN FLAMES

Demonstrators burn an American flag in Sheep Meadow of New York's Central park in Saturday's Spring Mobilization Against the War in Vietnam. A few persons were arrested as 60,000 marched in San Francisco and 125,000 in New York, but there was no major breakdown of law and order.

two cities.

The rallies were not without rebuttal. Rep. Joe Pool, D.Tex., Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller should be prepared to call out the National Guard "with fixed bayonels, machine guns and tanks," at the first sign of violence.

Sen. Robert C. Byrd, D-W. Va., charged in a Senate speech Friday that the rallies would "help kill American boys." Marine Maj. Douglas P. Jacobson of Willingboro, N.J., Lawrence Joel, a Negro soldier from Winston-Salem, N.C., and former Marine officer Carlton Rouhe of Lindenwold, N.J., spoke at a rally held by the American Legion in Philadelphia.

Half the student body of Cedarville College turned out for a rally on that Ohio campus to back President Johnson. At rally on the Indiana University Campus, slate Rep. William Bray labeled the peace demonstrators "the sheep and the goats of the American radical left."

Dr. Martin Luther King Jr., diverting his civil rights energies to the antiwar drive, led the East Coast rally, while his wife was with the West Coast demonstrators. He called the turnout "the largest peace demonstration ever held in the United States."

"I think this is just the beginning of a massive outpouring of dissent," King declared. "Distinguised statesmen the world over only the Watt Los Ang uniformer evidence.

believe the end of bombings to be the key to peace. A large minority of Americans want the bombings terminated."

He urged students "in colleges all over the nation to use this summer and coming summers educating and organizing communites across the nation against war."

The tensest of moments in New York occurred when hundreds of Negro marchers bolted the scheduled East Side parade route and swarmed down Seventh Avenue beyond police control to Times Square. others raced in near-riot through 48th Street until they were halted by a solid wall of police on horseback.

In midafternoon, 1,800 sailors were turned loose on shore leave with the arrival of the aircraft carrier Wasp. Their skipper, Capt. Melvin Ethridge, 44, of Birmingham, Ala., sternly admonished them to avoid the anitwar demonstrators.

There were draft card burnings in New York's Central Park, and some of the marchers shouted in defiance of the draft, "Hell no, we won't go." As about 15 men, one in clerical garb, tossed draft cards into a flaming coffee can, onlookers chanted "Burn, baby, burn," the slogan of the Watts Negro rioters in Los Angeles in 1965. No uniformed police were in evidence.

disappointed . . . he wants to see his family, that's all." Sheriff Willard Koeppel said, "He took it very well, considering."

THERE were cheers outside the locked courtroom when word came through that the jury had decided Speck was guilty and would die as the killer who destroyed eight young lives and daintily washed his hands after each murder.

Two of those who heard the verdict were fathers of the murdered girls. One, burly Chicago tavern owner
Joseph Matusek, spoke in a broken voice to newsmen outside the courthouse steps. He had attended almost all sessions of the trial of the man accused of slaying his 20-year-old daughter, Patricia Ann.

The other, Charles Davy of Dyer, Ind., the father of pretty Gloria Jean Davy, 22, whom the killer saved for the last for rape and strangulation, read a state-

"We, the members of the family in this trial wish to thank the Cook County state's attorney's office, the Chicago police, and the penple and authorities of Peoria for their helpful cooperation."

SPECK HIMSELF apparently was convinced of his guilt, he indicated in conversations with a psychiatrist while awaiting trial, the Chicago Sun-Times reported in its Sunday editions

In a lengthy story by police reporter Ray Brennan, the Sun-Times said Speck told Dr. Marvin Ziporyn at the Cook County jail in Chicago that he didn't remember the killings but "Let's say it was me."

Speck also indicated, the Sun-Times said Ziporyn's notes showed, that Speck hoped Getty "would not fight too hard for him since he feels he could not face a long prison term."

Ziporyn's notes showed, the Sun-Times reported, that Speck said he would give anything to be able to "bring those girls back to All Penney Stores Open Every Night Monday Through Saturday

Q. My son was injured on the job, filed a claim, and was given a compensation award by the Industrial Accident Commission. Later, he was given a release by a doctor, but since then he's been processed for three jobs with company, only to be turned down at the last minute. Is there a "black list" for those who've filed an industrial injury claim? Mrs. B. B., Long Beach.

A. No. William Kaplan, chairman of the Workmen's Compensation Appeals Board in San Francisco, says there's no such "black list," but each employer had full option to hire or turn down applicants, and many are skeptical of those with back injuries. Kaplan suggests you make application to the Department of Rehabilitation, 230 E. Fourth St., Long Beach, or call HE 7-0431. Albert Pfieffer, rehabilitation counselor, says one of the staff will advise you on possible retraining or selective job placement.

In reponse to the sound off about those little electric cars on the city streets, I've had an idea. Maybe we could let them remain on the sidewalks - out of traffic - but paint a lane on the curb side of the sidewalk and force them to stay in that lane. Everyone would know about the lane and take the necessary precautions. M. Z., Wilming-

Search Resumes for Lost Copter

By GEORGE LAINE

Marine Corps helicopters and ground teams --- armed with a provocative lead from a Lakewood electrical engineer - resumed their search at dawn today for a combat-type helicopter with four men aboard.

Lt. Donald Collins, of the El Toro Marine Air Station's information services office, said that little search effort had been expended in the area singled out by Richard Dills, of 5940 Candlewood St., Lakewood, as the soot where he and another man saw a low-flying copter shortly after noon Friday.

Dills was working on an oil lease project for the G.E. Kadane Co. in the West Newport area. 1'The man I was with said the copter was probably going to land on our lease. It was about head high when it wet out of our view. The man on the lease said that he hoped they didn't land out beyond that, because it was a big bog, mushy like quicksand," Dills said.

Because the copter was last seen on Long Beach and El Toro radar screens in the Huntington Beach area, much of the search has been centered there. However, Lt. Collins said the probe would move into the West Newport area at

In addition to the 12 helicopters, 12 ground searchers, a Coast Guard cutter and a two fixed-wing Coast Guard aircraft, 17 more Marines will begin combing beach areas from San Onofre to Corona Del Mar-

The Marine Corps Saturday identified the missing men as 2nd Lt. Edward J. Funcheon, 21, of Oceanside; 1st Lt. William E. Greenleese, 35, of Camp Pendleton; Cpl. Richard D. Millane, 20, of Rehoboth Beach, Del., and Capt. Har-old Plum, 32, of Cape Hed-

Push Bill for Safety in Camps

From Our Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — Every year, some 6 million children leave their parents to attend camps, and that's good, says Sen. Abraham Ribicoff, D-Conn.

But he warned that a good number of them don't have sufficient protection, and worrying mothers really have cause to worry.

So, Ribicoff this week re-introduced his bill which would set safety standards for youth day and travel camps.

Ribicoff said there's a good chance his bill, endorsed by the American Camping Association and many other "outdoor" groups, will be adopted before the summer.

There's no solid opposition to it, he noted. In fact it has backing of at least seven serators including Birch Bayh of Indiana, W. F. Mondale of Minnesota and Robert F. Kennedy, a member of the Senate Labor and Public Welfare Committee.

THE BILL, so far, has no official backing of the President Johnson administration. This could mean trouble, but Riblooff sees the Issure as too great to be ignored.

He noted, when he introduced the bill, that 19 of the 50 states have no regulations on the operation of

That is, there are no rules as to age and training of camp staffers, location of sleeping quarters, medical staffs, toilet facilities, sewage disposal, water supply, use of animals and food storage.

"It's tragic," he noted, "that while an entertainer in New York will have to be fingerprinted before she can get a license, just about anyone can become a camp counselor."

HE WARNED that camps essentially "take the place of parents — they care for our most precious possessions, our children."

The bill of Ribicoff doesn't intend to enforce "federal" standards. Instead, it offers federal funds to help state governments prepare minimum safety standards for camps.

Up to $50,000 per state can be granted to show the U.S. government's cooperation, he said.

If Ribicoff's bill is adopted, there'll he no "federal licensing" of camps.

But, he suggested that the camps that meet the federal-state standards by "properly identified" by certificates or other displays.

"THIS BILL doesn't aim to make the standards. It merely aims to inform parents seeking summer camps for their children," he said.

he said.
"The true test is the answer to this question, does the camp meet federal standards? If it does, the parent can safely send the child there."

Last year, Ribicoff—also without administration support—introduced a similar bill. It was endorsed by most outdoor groups, but many of the groups offered amendments.

After the bill failed, Ribicoff and his staff members visited camp sites and talked to thousands of camp enthusiasts.

The new bill is a result of their research.

Eyes Closed, Expert Says, to Pollution Disaster Risk

Los Angeles Saturday authorities have ignored the possibility of a air pollution disaster in which an area must be evacuated.

Dr. Arie J. Haagen-Smit, professor of bio-organic chemistry at Caltech, also called for intensified research into subtle but dangerous effects of chronic exposure to low level air pollution.

He said: "One of the essential responsibilities for government in our every-more-crowded urban areas is to be able to predict at a moment's notice which arcas will have to be evacuated or protected (in case of an air pollution incident or disaster).

"GOVERNMENT has a role in seeing to it that an orderly evacuation can be gen-Smit told a University of Southern California conference on urban ecology. "Up until the present this responsibility has been largely ignored by the aulem, the citizenry has to be aroused to some form of organized community action," he said, "They also have to be told the disagreeable fact that if they want clean air, they will have to pay for it."

In another speech Saturday to a meeting of the American College of Chest Physicians, he noted that while the levels of pollutants might be below industrial health standards, "it is not certain at all that these levels are not harmful to persons who already suffer from another medical prob-

"There is presently concern about the influence of these low concentrations on driver fatigue and reaction time, especially in people whose oxygen transport is limited as in anemics and those with circulatory and respiratory insufficiency."

He noted this study is particularly important since freeway commuters were exposed to relatively high concentrations of from 50 to 100 parts per million during rush nour traffic.

She adds there has never before been a floor fight over the nominating committee's choice for the presidency in the federation's 29-year history.

But there is this time. Mrs. Phyllis Schlafly of Alton, Ill., author of the 1964 campaign book "A Choice, Not an Echo," has announced she'll make it a

The fight probably will move into the convention hotel hospitality suite May when the two candidates will lead an arriving parade, including 4,649 delegates.

Mrs. Elston's statement Saturday was in reply to Mrs. Schlafly's charges that when the nominating committee bypassed her, al-though she was the first vice president, it was "an-other attempt by the New York liberals to purge from office those who whole heartedly supported Sen. Goldwater in 1964."

Mrs. Schlafly declared there was "no case in recent years" where a first vice president, willing and able to serve, had been denled the presidency.

But Mrs. Elston says the federation never has operated on an automatic ascension principle. "Only two of 11 first vice presidents have even been invited by the nominating committee to succeed to the presidency," she says.

She cites also precedent for elevation to the presidency of a standing com-mittee chairman like Mrs. O'Donnell, who now is program planning chairman.

Barry Goldwater has written Mrs. Elston saying he wanted to "put the lie" to charges that the forthcoming federation election will be a contest between the "so-called liberal Eastern wing of the party and the so-called Western wing."

When Mrs. Elston re-leased only part of the let-ter — that included praise of Mrs. O'Donnell but not similar comment about Mrs. Schlafly — charges flared again. Mrs. Elston reports that Goldwater told her she could release all or any part of the letter.

WORLD NEWS BRIEFS Girl Chained Like Animal

DETROIT (UP!) — For four years, police said, Debbie Coffman, 11, lived much like a little animal in her own home. She subsisted ona daily bowl of dry ceral and she was forced to stay out in the cold while her brothers and sisters got more loving care.

Now those years of darkness are over. Debbie's parents Saturday were charged with child abuse. And authorities were asking why Debbie was mistreated and why it took so long for Debbie's story to unfold.

The neighbors knew of it and kept silent. Relatives said they "didn't want to cause trouble in the family."

But someone couldn't take it. Police, acting on a tip, entered the suburban Rockwood home of Donald Coffman, 32, and his wife, Martlyn, 31, Friday and found the frail girl tied to her bed. They cut her loose and arrested the parents, who were held on $10,000 bond. "Nobody's been treated like that little girl since the dark ages," said Westland Municipal Judge Douglas W. Craig. "It's unbelievable, just unbelievable."

The judge said police "had to cut the bindings of the ropes from the child's body. They couldn't even he untied, they were so tight.'

Debbie told police that she was forced to use the backyard as a lavatory, walk alone three miles to school in the same tattered dress, stay out until 11 o'clock at night in the cold—and was strapped to her bed the rest of the time.

Her five brothers and sisters, meanwhile, aged 2 to 9, ate and dressed well, and rode to school, police said.

3 Steps Planned to Curb L.B. Soot

From Our State Bureau

SACRAMENTO - Assemblyman James A. Hayes, R-Long Beach, has been advised three new steps are under way to curb smoke and soot fallout from two power plants in the Long Beach area;

1.—Twenty per cent less fuel oil will be burned by the plants rext heating season due to increased natural gas supplies to be imported to Southern California.

2.--Utility firms by next year must install bag-filters atop smokestacks, a move designed to screen out some of

3.-A move is under way to seek federal approval to import a type of fuel oil which has a low-content of sulfuric acid. Acid-laden fuel causes some of the present

Hayes learned of the steps to cure soot fallout at a conference with Reine J. Corbeil, project engineer for Pacific Lighting Service & Supply Co.

Corbeil anticipates new Pacific-supplied gas will reduce to 55 days the numbeer of days the power plants will burn fuel oil next season.

POLICEMAN FLIER

Plane Crackup Kills Pilot; Youth Injured

young Los Angeles policeman was killed today and a teen-age youth seriously injured when a light plane flown by the officer crashed into a hillside near the Newhall oil refinery.

Killed instantly in the crash was officer Richard L. Burke, 22, of Sylmar. His passenger, Gary Krystof, 18 of Lakeview Terrace, was taken to Golden State Hospital, where he was given emergeony treatment for major injuries, including a broken jaw.

He was in fair condition. A motorist saw the wreckage of the plane in a pasture a quarter mile east of Highway 14, about two miles north of Highway 99, and called the Newhall sheriff's station.

Burke's body was inside the plane. The unconsicous Krystof was lying across the wing. Deputies said they found footprints in the pasture which indicated Krystof had got out of the plane and walked around before he collapsed.

Burke had taken off from Van Nuys Airport at 6 a.m. The wreckage was found in the pasture at 8:20 a.m.

Investigators said the plane apparently slammed into the hill in a heavy overcast,

Burke joined the Police Department a year ago and worked out of the Foothill

LISTENS FOR CALL

Stassen Pushes Viet Peace Plan

WASHINGTON --- At 60, hope for a better world and perhaps one more try for public office still springs eternal in the stubborn, lonely breast of Harold E. Stassen.

Undaunted by his image as one of America's most consistently unsuccessful political figures, the former Republican 'boy wonder' from Minnesota has launched out in a new pursuit of the public good.

Stassen's latest solitary campaign calls for bringing about a settlement of the Vietnam war through modernizing and strengthening the United Nations.

And, despite the fact that he won his last public elec-tion in 1942, he is carefully avoiding closing the door on any future bid for political office, just in case his single-handed mission projects him into public prominence again.

NOW A Philadelphia attorney specializing in international law, Stassen spent his 60th birthday in Washington Thursday looking after some business matters. He discussed his new role of self-professed elder statesman over a breakfast of orange juice, soft-boiled eggs and coffee in his hotel

The years have further thinned the sparse, sandy hair of the man who was elected governor of Minne-sota at 31 and once was an important contender for the presidency. But he still is outwardly the same serious, self-assured, deliberate hulk of a man who was important enough in 1945 to rate an entire chapter in John Gunther's book, "Inside USA." Staring straight at you with big piercing eyes, Stassen explains his lifelong interest in and dedication to contributing toward world peace, or "peace with justice" as he calls it.

"I'm convinced that the current American thinking and action in Vietnam are tragically mistaken," he declares. "In my view, continued military action, escalation or withdrawal are all grave mistakes.

HAROLD E. STASSEN Hope Doesn't Die

took the position that there is another way to achieve an honorable and desirable end to the war in Vietnam. I call it "the fourth alterna-

"IT CONSISTS OF quieting down the war, while maintaining our presence there, and putting the priority on diplomatic initiatives for genuine social, economic and political reforms that will appeal to the peo-ple of Vietnam."

The only way this can be done, Stassen strongly believes, is by modernizing the viewstrenghtening United Nations, a point he has promulgated in a policy statement he circu-lated last month among Republican governors and congressmen.

In a cover letter accompanying the 16-page statement, Stassen asserted that the UN charter must be revised to bring "all of the people on this one world within the organization."

This universal membership, Stassen maintains, would include both North and South Vietnam as well as governments of other divided countries such as Germany, Korea and China, and would aid in "moving the intense world strugle toward a long-term, non-war competition of systems. This is preferable to a continuation of a sharp spreading war, with inherent growing dangers of a future world nuclear war.

Senators Take Up 4 Redwood Plans

By BAXTER OMOHUNDRO From Our National Bureau

WASHINGTON hike into a dense legislative thicket will be taken Mon-day by the Senate Interior Committee when it begins consideration of proposals to create a redwoods national park in northwest California.

In two days of hearings, the committee will hear two dozen witnesses on park proposals that vary widely on philosophy and detail.

By late last week, the committee was set to hear three basic proposals with a fourth due from the state administration on Monday. The three:

1. A 44,000 acre area proposed by the federal administration and Sen. Thomas H. Kuchel, R-Calif.

2. A 90,000 acre area pushed by the conserva-tionist Sierra Club.

3. A 53,000 acrea area put forward by timbering interests and Rep. Don Clausen, Crescent City.

The position of the state administration probably won't be known until Monday, but it is expected to be close to the Kuchel plan. However, the state is certain to firmly insist that the federal government cede some of its nonpark land for inclusion in the state park system and some of its non-redwoods preserves for lumbering firms whose lands would be taken into the national park.

The latter point, mainly involving privately owned timberland in the Mill Creek area south of Jededlah Smith Redwoods State Park, is regarded by the state as essential to keeping up the lumbering activities so important to the area's economy. Administration opposition to this is expected.

While the Clausen plan overall and "old growth" acreage is larger than that of the Kuchel plan, much less of it now is privately owned. It envisions that the federal park take in a proportionately much larger share of land now in state or federal ownership.

Thus, the Clausen plan would not give complete insurance against future cut-ting in lands that are not now protected by public ownership although Clausen has said that timbering companies would set aside large tracts of their land for public recreation use.

. . . . ambitious Sierra The Club plan would take in much larger private and "old growth" acreage than either of the other two proposals, but much of this would be in fringe areas where the ancient trees are thinly dispersed among other evergreens such as douglas fir.

This - the character of the groves under study is one of the points that the committee will have to consider that cannot be set down in cold statistics.

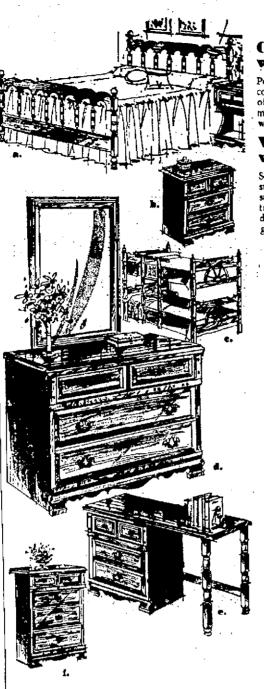

Here's a breakdown on acreage in each park pro-

William Scranton, a pharmacist, described the explosion.

Scranton said the box was on the floor.

I saw Scott Lindsay (an other employe) reach for it, but Lee Holbrook threw him back," Scranton said.

PRESS. TELEGRAM. Irate Husband Bombs Store; S. Vietnam's Maginot Line Four Bodies Found in Ruins Brings Military Skepticism

SAIGON - Skepticism was expressed by informed sources Saturday as to the usefulness of a fortified barrier south of the demilitarized zone which Premier Nguyn Cao Ky announced is now under construction. Ky said that the barrier vould extend 15 miles inland from the South China Sea, at an average distance three miles from the demilitarized zone which sep-arates North and South ietnam. He said evacua tion of the estimated 20,000 villagers living in the strip etween the DMZ and the barrier line would "start

The purpose of the barrier is to halt infiltration of North Vietnamese troops over the coastal plain, Ky

The sources noted, however, that the principal routes of infiltration through the 45-mile frontier from the coast to the Lautian border are in the rugged mountains beyond the western reaches of the projected barrier. While there were indications that the premier made his announcement without consulting American commanders, the sources said the concept did not surprise them.

According to the informants, American military strategists had been considering a barricade of the border for at least two years. But some were reluctant to commit the estimated 30,000 men thought necessary to patrol the entire border area, and the majority felt that a partial barrier would be futile.

Ky said the decision to evacuate the northernmost villagers and to build the barrier was justified "because the situation is very serious." He did not detail the construction of the barricade, but he estimated it would cost the equivalent of $1.36 million.

THE BEARDED ONE

Uproar in Iowa

By BRUCE B, BAKKE

AMES, Iowa (UPI) - Don Smith ran for presidnet of the lowa State University student body on a promise to drag the school "kicking and screaming into the 20th century."

At this point, it is difficult to tell who is dragging what, and where. But there has been an unholy amount of kicking and screaming going on at Iowa State ever since the bearded engineering senior was elected.

Smith — who believes the university should not try to regulate anything that isn't strictly academic — has been making news since the day he was elected.

But the uproar surrounding him didn't reach its peak until last week, when the collge newspaper revealed Smith had attended a marijuana

Up to then, most Iowa State students who cared about campus politics appeared to support Smith, at least to some extent. But the ink was hardly dry on the marijuana story in the Iowa State Daily before "impeach Smith" petitions were being circulated on campus.

THE IMPEACHMENT action now is, in the hands of the student senate. Rather than take immediate action on it, the senate has called for a campus-wide poll on Paffaire Smith.

Smith is 21, soft-spoken, friendly and completely unconcerned about his personal appearance. His hair is long and uncombed. His beard is shaggy and untrimmed. He wears sweat shirts in the winter and sports shirts in the summer and perfer sandals to shoes. He doesn't bother with socks at any time.

He has been known to "dress up" only once this year—the night he was inaugurated as president of the student hody. He showed up in a blazer and tie, plaid slacks and wing-tip shoes without socks — and apologized.

"A man should be judged by what he thinks, not by what he wears," Smith said. "I sold out tonight and wore this." Smith thinks the marijuana disclosure "is being used as an excuse by many people who have been trying to get rid of me and my ideas since

A typical Smith idea is that the university should keep out of the students' private lives.

"They have in a student rule book 20 pages of rules," he said, "You can't have women in our rooms at the dorms and frats, no liquor in our rooms, any student can be expelled if he takes part in a student action in bad taste. I'm against

SMITH WOULD have each housing unit draw up its own regulation. The students would govern

He outlined a three-point bill of student rights at his inauguration:

-No student can be expelled except for academic failure.

-The administration cannot veto any government of the student body action, except those concerned with regular classes.

---The university does not have the right to tell sudents where they can live, who they can live with, or what rules they can live by.

It is perhaps ironic that Smith should pop up at staid old lowa State, which has a deserved reputation for turning out hard-working, no-nonsense technicians, farmers, scientists and homeconomists. Iowa State is a symbol of the marriage of science and agriculture that has made Iowa one of the greatest agricultural areas in the world. Smith, himself, comes from a small farming community in western lowa.

That Smith should turn Iowa State on its car is a source of some private amusement of many lowans, particularly in Iowa City, home of the "liberal" University of Iowa. But it is not a bit funny to the Iowa State administration.

OFFICIALLY THE administration is keeping a hands off attitude and hoping the legislature will do likewise. Dr W. Robert Parks, the lowa State president, issued a statement that "for me to have maintained silence . . . in the face of all the pressures upon me to speak out has been by far the most difficult . . . thing which I have done since I have been presiding to Iowa State." He expressed confidence in the ability of the student to deal with the situation.

Former Presdient Dr. James Hilton, now director of development, couldn't help wincing a little. "Anybody who doesn't think this is hurting lowa State has another guess coming," he said, Iowa State is engaged in a fund-raising drive to build a continuing education center, a building that would be used for short courses and meetings attended by thousands of Iowans.

'The drive was gong along so beautifully," Hilton said, "but now we're deeply concerned about getting the rest of the funds to complete the cen-

One graduate wrote that he would not pay "until Iowa State eliminates Don Smith." Parents have threatened to withdraw their sons and daughters fro mthe school, or not to send them there in the first place. A letter from a graduate which came in last week said: "No donation, One lends to lose their admiration and respect for a student body that endorses a sockless bearded, marijuana-party boy."

Antoher alumnus returned his donation evelope empty, except for a crumpled newspaper clipping about Smith.

Three Gunmen Hold Up L.B. Bar, Flee with $650

A gun-toting trio of bandits threatened 18 patrons in a Long Beach bar and fled with $650 from the cash register and customers' wallets early Saturday.

The three men entered the Keona Club, 1115 E. Wardlow Road, at 12:20 a.m., and ordered drinks, owner Charles J. Heckel said, Then they pulled small handguns and or-dered, "Put your hands on the bar."

Customers said at first they thought it was a joke, but one gunman fired a shot at the ceiling.

"Put your hands on the bar, or I'll blow every one of your heads off," he said-

As a second gunman emptied the cash register, the third bandit knocked glasses off the bar and collected wallets, police said. Then the robbers departed via a rear door.

Skies were clearing Saturday and the weather bureau said no more rain was expected for Sunday. However, flooding still persisted outside the city and in surrounding parishes (counties).

In Livingston Parish, directly to the east, the rain-swollen Comite and Amite sloshed over their banks and pushed into surrounding lowlands.

No deaths were attrib-uted directly to the flooding, although in nearby St. Francisville, lightning set fire to a house and Mrs. Elizabeth Hastings, 87, died of smoke inhalátion.

In Livingston Parish about 80 persons were evacuated Saturday from low ground. Deputy Sheriff Herman Wilkinson said Hog Branch Canal had overflowed and flooded nearby residents out. Most Baptist Church in Living-

MUSICAL NIGHT TO REMEMBER

Long Beach's Linda Cur-High School student, flew Saturday to do some serious fiddling in New York

The talented daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harold S. Curtis of 2340 Fanwood Ave. will be swinging a sweettoned violin as a member of the 90-piece "American Youth Performs" orchestra scheduled for the second annual "Musical Night to Remember" Thursday in Carnegie Hall.

Backing up the young musicians from the United States, Canada and Mexico will be a 120-voice youth chorus, plus guest soloists and conductors. The event is cosponsored by American Airlines as part of its nationwide community relations program.

. . . . LONG BEACH'S representative, who has been playing the violin since the age of 9, not only is thrilled her selection in the "Youth Performs" program but also she's mighty serious about a musical career.

She will "double-major," starting next year, at University of Southern California in music performance and education — and, in so doing, sort of musically shadow her older brother, Don, 19, a USC student who plays the clarinet. "Little" brother Steve, 14,

Expert Insists That Needle Killed Wife

NAPLES, Fla. (P) -After five hours of intense cross examination, whitehaired Dr. Milton Helpern stepped wearily off the witness stand Saturday, still insisting that Carmela Cop-polino was killed with a drug injection.

"No more questions," de-fense attorney F. Lee Bailey called out after a long effort to get Helpern to say that in some hypothetical situation he might withdraw his opinion.

WILLIAMSBURG, Va. (UPI) - Gov. George Romney, his hat practically in the ring for the GOP presidential nomination, invaded Nixon territory Saturday night and charged that president Johnson's "Great Society" is waging war on fiscal integrity.

Hitting a favorite theme, the Michigan governor said in a prepared speech that giant unions and industries have formed collective bargaining monopolies that 'skim the cream off our economic progress." The situation "is getting beyond White House Intervention and arm-twisting," he said.

Romney came to Virginia just one day after making a candid announcement in the Michigan capital at if his fellow Republicans want him, "There's not much question I'll run" for president. While he attacked Johnadministration fiscal policies, he left a cash crisis of his own at home.

The findings of the 64-year-old New York City medical examiner—that an injection of the drug succinylcholine paralyzed and killed Carmela—is the foundation of the state's murder charge against her husband, Dr. Carl Coppo-

Under Bailey's harrage of questions, Helpern said time and again that his own autopsy and chemical tests by his associate, Dr. Charles J. Umberger, showed poisoning as the only explanation for the death.

When it is injected into the body, succinylcholine splits up quickly into two harmless components--succinic acid and choline.

Over and over again, Bailey demanded to know that the two components found in Carmela's brain could be accounted for from some other source than an injection, "would you withdraw your opin-

"No," Helpern insisted.

SUPPOSE, Bailey said, an expert defense witness would testify that the embalming process increased the amount of choline in the brain of Carmela, who had been dead nearly four months when the body was removed from the grave.

"He might say it, but he can't establish it." Helpern replied.

He added that the quantity of choline was irrelevant. The important factor, he said, was the presence of the two components to-

Pacifist A-Test Defier Called Suicide

Carl V. May, 45, the pacifist who tried to sail the yacth Everyman into a nuclear test zone in the Pacific Ocean in 1962, apparently took his own life, police said Saturday.

May, who also aided in the rehabilitation of juveniles in San Francisco, was found dead Friday in his car, parked in the 4300 block of West Santa Barbara Avenue.

Authorities said May died of carbon monoxide poisoning and a gunshot wound. Detectives reported the bullet wound apparently was self-inflected.

personlly, no one is concerned about Long Beach's grooming than Harry Krusz, the chamber of commerce boss. His pet irritation, at the moment, is dirty sidewalks.

Some cities do better than others in this matter says Krusz, and we're not one of those who do better. When I visited him Friday, he suggested an appeal here to the citizenry to clicck their lifter-shedding.

Krutz agreed with me that one problem is that of the entryways to unoccupied stores. But, he noted, the litter that accumulates in such places must be dropped by somebody. Just a little more care, he said, could make a whale of a difference in the looks of the city.

You can't argue with that," I told him, being careful to flip my cigar ashes into the tray in his well-ordered office.

THOSE habitues of the Pacific Coast Club who organized in behalf of desert wild burros are in a bigger thing than they anticipated. There was quick response to newspaper account of their Society for the Preservation of Wild Desert Canaries, and already about 100 burro lovers have signed up. Membership fees are rolling in and now they're going to qualify as a non-profit corportion.

It all got started when somebody reported that there had been a big dropoff of the burro population and that nustlers had been spotted rounding up the little animals, probably for grinding machines. Clar-ence Hunt is president, Bar-low Wood treasurer and Sherm Williams secretary of this new entry in the wildlife preservation field.

Back in the Corps

THE SKINHEAD MARINE boot sitting next to me in the San Diego Marine Corps Recruit Depot mess hall stared at my bald head and paunchy mid-section and whis-

"Are you joining our platoon?"

"No. son," I said still huffing from the stationary double-time we did while waiting for chow, "I went through all this some 20 years ago and now I'm back doing a story on how it feels to be a boot."

I could tell that my conversation was upsetting the recruit as he cocked a wary eye toward the drill instructor, a tough-looking sergeant standing at the end of the table. pleaded the boot, "Don't get me in trouble for talking." I nodded that I understood and he continued: "You mean you're going back through boot camp

"Yeah, that's the general idea."

"All eight weeks?" he said in an incredulous squeak that alerted the DI, who barked: "If I catch the guy talking down there he's gonna eat doing pushups. Do you hear

"No," I told this boot through clenched teeth while staring straight ahead. "It's just for one day."

"Man, you must be stupid," the boot answered under the cover of the DI's command: "Eat."

The boot was right. If I learned anything 23 years ago at Parris Island, S.C., it should have been never to volunteer. But, since I am an old Parris Island Marine I jumped at the chance to prove once and for all the legend that P.I. Marines are the real Marines and the San Diego boot camp is reserved for the soft Hollywood types.

All was for naught, because the cockeyed Corps changed its boot camp routine so that I couldn't draw a comparison. But even the old salts at San Diego were quick to agree that P. I. is still the toughest.

Why there ain't even a sand flea at San Diego.

I can still remember standing at attention in the September swelter at the old South Carolina Navy prison while my DI, Sgt. Burl Smith (the original mean old man) bellowed: "You people are surrounded by a body of water filled with man-eatin' crocodiles. Before you're through here you'll be willing to swim through them crocodiles just to get away from me."

He was right. Sgt. Smith raised sand fleas for a hobby; said his daily litany in profanity (he had a particularly loving word that would shock the filthy-speech movement) and I'm sure he never slept because he was always in the barracks at 2 a.m. to see how fast we could put together a field transport pack.

He once tied ropes around my ankles to teach me the double-to-the-rear march. I learned it fast, after falling flat on my face only four times. He also painted "left" and "right" on the dungaree pant legs of a Wisconsin farm boy who couldn't tell his hay foot from his straw foot.

UT THAT WAS all back in the Old Corps. Today it's different - most of the constant dawn to dawn harassment of boots has given way to another training method - physical endurance. Today, I discovered, the Corps builds men — young ones, but it kills the old ones.

On my trip into the time machine, I found little to remind me of my boot days. The profanity is downright saintly today. I think they are using chaplains for DIs.

The only thing that triggered my memory was the marching. The Dis still bark the same unintelligible commands; still chew your ear off for a foul-up (a new word in the DI's vocabulary) and still crack funnies without changing that deadpan look.

When the DI told me to pull in my chin and I magically developed two, he bellowed: "Boy you got two chins. The Marine Corps only issued you one, That second one ain't regulation and you get rid of it."

When he ordered parade rest, I discovered changes had been made. I was the only one doing it right, with my rifle muzzle pointed stiffly to the front while the other troops had their tucked cozily against their leg. Seeing this, the DI snarled: "Boy, must you be odd?"

I began to tremble when he gave the command to swivel stack the rifles. The last time I was in boot camp I knocked over a stack which set off a chain reaction and the rifles fell like dominoes. I slept with 14 rifles for a week. I was wondering how my wife would cotton to such strange bed fellows.

The one thing I found conspicuously missing is the swagger stick. The new Corps has replaced it with the pugil stick. That's a padded baseball bat used by two boots to slug it out until the DI decides that one has killed the - a declaration he makes only shortly before it is a

I was going fine with the pugil stick on my 18-year-old opponent (I tricked him with some World War II bayonet tactics) until the DI had to go and yell: "What's wrong with you boy? That's a civilian you're fighting. That sparked the Marine pride in the lad, who tried to wipe out one civilian. I thought for a moment he would, until the DI declared me dead.

In hand-to-hand combat someone told my opponent that I was an Army spy coming in to find out if the Marines were as tough as they claimed. After decking me, the skinhead slammed his fist into my chest, knocking my breath from San Diego to Ft. Ord.

IN THE FIELD, weighted down with a steel helmet, a pack and a rifle I had to dash 50 yards, pick up a "wounded" Marine (they said he only weighed 130 pounds) and dash back. I only dropped him once, and the DI snapped: "Boy you're supposed to be saving him, not killing him." On my way I saw an ambulance with Navy Corpsmen standing alongside and I knew they were waiting for me.

I staggered toward the ambulance, but a DI grabbed me by the arm and in typical DI monologue said: "Boy, you don't want those swabble pill-pushers to think you're soft. That ambulance is only for those who have lost a

The obstacle course wasn't too rough except when I fell off the rope walk and the DI accused me of trying to steal government property when he saw the sawdust on my sweatshirt. And then there was the rope swing over the pand. I made it, but warried some when the boot just ahead of me didn't and the DI yelled:

"What are you going to do now, Pvt. Swearingson?"

Forlorn, the boot replied: "Sir, I'm going to sink

He did.

There was a long crawl with full combat gear through a narrow sand pit in which the DI kept yelling at me that if I didn't keep IT down I was going to get IT shot off. I must have made an ass of myself, because I never did get

LONG BEACH, CALIFORNIA .

'Cal State' Actually Is University

WHILE California legislators grapple with budgets and salaries for higher education, an Assembly bill indirectly related to those problems has been largely ignored.

It is Assembly Bill 946. In effect if would redesignate the California State College system as California State University, But it would let the Board of Trustees decide which of the two titles should be applied to individual colleges.

Thus California State College at Long Beach, one of the most advanced and fully developed of the 18 units would logically be renamed a university. New and smaller units, such as Dominguez, might well remain colleges for the immediate future.

There are a number of reasons for the proposed change. In the opinion of educators most familiar with the system, the major reason is that the colleges are, in fact, a university system.

The Long Beach unit, for example, has nine divisions (which shortly will be regrouped into "schools," just as at a university), and 44 departments. It offers baccalaureate degrees (Bachelor of Arts and Bachelor of Science) and in many fields the master's degree under disciplines comparable with those of the university system.

Since the Master Plan for Education became law some six years ago, the whole college system has evoled rapidly. Differences between the university and college systems (never clearly spelled out in the plan) have lessened. Both are functioning now primarily as groups of universities.

If specialized higher research is to remain with the University of California, that distinction will still be indicated in the slight difference

A further advantage in the change of name is the greater availability of federal and foundation grants for various purposes to

As the colleges continue to develop, broadening their programs and their opportunities, this form of supplemental financing will increase proportionately.

Educators consider the problem of faculty recruitment - now acute - as a "valid but peripheral" reason for the change in

They do agree that a new doctor of philosophy from an outstanding Eastern or Midwestern university would be more apt to respond to an offer if made in the name of a university rather than a college. And a growing number of states have already made the change.

In recruitment, however, budget and salary questions deserve priority. Once they are decided, the legislature should move toward changing the title of the colleges to conform with the reality of their growth and stature.

Naturally, All Voted for Ethics

THE HOUSE of Representatives, which hardly ever agrees unanimously in any roll call, has cast a phenomenal 400-to-0 vote to create an ethics committee.

. A simple explanation is that no member of Congress cared to inform his constituents, by way of the press and the Congressional Record, that he was against ethics.

But it is reasonable to surmise also that the House is feeling unease over the history of the Adam Clayton Powell case, even though the Harlem Congressman-elect was not mentioned in the debate.

Powell's high jinks had been widely reported for many months - and never denied before his colleagues got around to taking a stand.

Then on March 1, in an onset of righteous indignation, they voted to exclude him from the seat to which his district had re-elected him. Now re-elected again, he or his claim to a seat will be back to haunt them.

The ethics committee will come too late to erase the deepening of racial tensions and the aura of martyrdom already cast around a figure who does not deserve the role.

As a psychological facesaving aid, it may enable some Congressmen to change their March 1 votes, seat Powell and then proceed to the question of punishing him in an orderly

But the committee must not he merely a face-saving device. Ultimately it should serve as an active and timely force to discipline rambunctious Congressmen before their cases reach the point of no return.

A Sensible Decision by NAACP

THE NATIONAL Association for the Advancement of Colored People has, in our view, served the cause of civil rights by attempting to divorce it from protests against the Vietnam war.

In opposing the merger of the two movements, the NAACP's 60-member board of directors differed sharply with Dr. Martin Luther King, a difficult decision for even the biggest and oldest of the , civil rights organizations.

Dr. King is of course entitled to his own opinions-even the extreme opinion (for a man who usually measures his words) that the U.S. government is the "greatest purveyor of violence in the world today." But he departs from good judg- perspective.

ment when he implies, as he did before an audience in New York's Riverside Church, that advocates of civil rights must also resist the policy of this nation in Vietnam.

The NAACP board objects to the equation mainly on the ground that it is a "serious tactical mistake." We agree that the job of enforcing and strengthening civil rights is big enough without trying to combine it with the shaping of international policy.

In our opinion, the merger is objectionable for another reason: The equation is false.

The enemy in Vietnam is not interested in civil rights except to re-

In Hanoi, Peking and Moscow, the most elemental of civil rights--the right to vote--is no problem. It does not exist. In the villages of South Vietnam under U.S. protection, voting has started.

It is tragic that some reputable American civil rights leaders are placing their cause in jeopardy by blind emotion. We hope the NAACP will help restore their

Reagan Has Edge in Blue-Pencil Battle

From Our State Bureau

SACRAMENTO - Gov. Ronald Reagan is likely to win any battle over blue-penciling the budget.

That is pretty well the consensus here on the issue of whether the legislature is capable of mustering a twothirds majority to override a Reagan fund-cut.

The governor already has hurled the blue-pencil threat at the legislature, Reagan says he will veto by crossing out with a blue pencil any unacceptable augmentations to his $5 billion budget.

Statistically, a solid Democrat bloc could override Reagan if it could re-cruit 12 Republican votes in the Assembly and six more in the Senate.

that it would take widespread GOP defections to put a Reagan veto in cratic attitude on countering Reagan's blue pencil.

Says Unruh: "I don't think there's much chance of anybody passing any-thing over the governor's veto this year. We didn't do it during eight But in a legislature split 42-38 in year. We didn't do it during eight the Assembly and 21-18 in the Senate, years under Edmund G. Brown, and as passed anything over Goodwin Knight's veto.

"It is very difficult to get a twothirds vote of both houses, particularly with the division as close as it is

That means the real battle is under way now as to the final budget figures for mental hygiene, higher education, etc. Once the governor makes a final determination, that is likely to be the end result.

So one shouldn't interpret all the legislative furor over Reagan fiscal proposals as an indication that the legislature will make mince-meat of the Reagan financial program. Bitter denouncements from lawmakers may influence Reagan through public opinion, however.

But mere legislative opposition isn't likely to alter the final shape of the budget due to the constitutional weapon that has been handed the governor: the blue pencil.

A Drag Race Gave Avalon Its 400 Mark

IT WAS a dead-end canyon, uphill ail the way to Avalon's single polling place. It was a rainy day. The bars were open. And Friday is usually a going-away day for island residents.

And yet, while Long Beach, Lakewood and Signal Hill voters recorded their typically apathetic vote-18 per cent this time-in the April 7 Long Beach Unified School District election, Avalon, the remotest precinct in the district, voted a phenomenal 50 per cent.

Combining know-how and show-how, an even 400 of the island's 797 cligible voters demonstrated a degree of citizenship that the rest of the district's voters couldn't touch-and haven't touched in recent history.

Although good citizenship was the order of that day on Avalon, in an almost festive atmosphere of team spirit, island observers looked to Felipe Hernandez as a symbol of the mood of their success.

HERNANDEZ was severely injured In a quarry accident eight months ago. Late afternoon election day his full leg cast was being changed at the hospital, not far from the polling place in the school auditorium.

"I'm gonna vote," he said. Hospital personnel weren't so sure. But they used sun lamps on his wet cast to speed the drying. Felipe's wife pushed his wheelchair up the canyon hill. Four of their chil-

"WE'RE BREAKING our necks to run out of ballots," the Avalon caller reported proudly to Long Beach election headquarters.

"Oh, I wouldn't advise that," came the startling reply from a headquarters worker.

It was 6:50 p.m. Three to go to hit 400. It was like an overtime basketball game. Vote watchers looked for cars coming up the hill. They even counted silhouetted heads in one. Three people. Alas, only one was an

can woman candidate got 4,091 and a Conservative Party candidate, 427.

Powell's supporters took the tack that he had been magnificently vindicated by receiving 86 per cent of the vote, and blamed the small turnout on the fact that it was a special election. In a special election on March 28 in the 2nd Congressional District in Rhode Island, which is only slightly more populous than Powell's (459,706), the total vote for three candidates was 114,840, and for the two major party candidates, 111,818.

There are approximately 200,000 registered voters in that district, as against 120,000 in Powell's.

In that fact lies the probable indica-tor of where the political process in Powell's district begins to go wrong.

But leaving out past ineffectiveness in registration, the special election in the 18th New York district was nothing more or less than a miserable, discouraging performance from start to finish.

L. A. C. SAYS The Attacks on Senator Kuchel

By L. A. COLLINS SR.

THE INTEMPERATE attacks on Senator Kuchel by the volunteer California Republican Assembly (CRA) were not in the best interest of party harmony. Referring to his vote on the U.S. Soviet consular exchange as "treasonable" was an intemperate act that deserves condemnation by all who seek unity in the party. This attack has brought indignant replies from newspapers and many party members.

However these replies in support of Sen. Kuchel fail to bring out the real reasons why so many Republicans are now opposing Kuchel. All they do is to defend Kuchel and point out that any party disunity is detrimental to the whole party. Actually any party disunity toward Kuchel was brought about by him when he refused to support the party nominees in the last two important elections.

He had a right to deny such support, but by the same reasoning he opened the door to opposition to himself by those who disagree with his own actions. Many Republicans feel that Kuchel does not now represent the wishes of those who elected him to the Senate. If they are opposed to him on definite issues they should be stated in temperate language with stated reasons for their opposition.

This writer is unhappy over the voting record of Kuchel on what I consider vital issues. First was his vote on repealing Sec. 14B of the Taft-Hartley law which permits states to have right-to-work laws. This means a worker does not have to belong to a union to get or hold a job. Nineteen states now have such laws. But Kuchel voted in favor of repeal of the law which was not successful due to the fight by Senator Dirksen. As an excuse for his vote Kuchel stated he did so because California had rejected such a law. But he would deprive other states of the right.

By contrast to his reasoning he voted for the President's civil rights law which under Sec. 4 would provide a Rumford-type open housing law for all states. This measure was defeated last year but is again before Congress. It should be noted that Kuchel voted for this measure after the people of California had by a two-to-one vote approved Prop. 14 which would have repealed the Rumford Act. Thus he voted against what the people of his state had approved. This is quite a contrast to his explanation of his vote for repeal of 14B of the Taft-

The integrity of Senator Kuchel is not questioned. It is apparent his vote on these issues is according to his convictions-which are similar to Justice Earl Warren who appointed Kuchel to the Senate seat vacated by Richard Nixon when Nixon was elected to the vice presidency. But I do not consider Kuchel as deserving of Republican support in the primary election if he is opposed by a Republican whose attitude is more in line with the state vote to repeal the Rumford Act.

It should be recognized that Kuchel has himself set the pattern for not supporting party candidates. He did so when he refused to support Senator Murphy and Goldwater two years ago or Ronald Reagan last year. Apparently he did not approve of the principles of these candidates. He is now facing the fact that a large portion of his own party does not approve of the principles and votes he has fo!lowed the past few years.

Many changes will occur before the June, 1968, primaries when party candidates will be chosen.

Details of Peace Feelers Show President Sincere

that: 1. Contrary to Bobby Kennedy's insinuation, President Johnson took the initiative and sincerely tried to achieve a truce.

2. The Russians did their best to help him.

3. Chinese influence with North Vietnam counted more than Russian influence.

4. There probably will never be peace in Vietnam until either the North Vietnamese are completely defeated or the Russians win more influence than the Chinese.

5. The reason President Johnson has been so reluctant to seal Haiphong Harbor is that by shutting off Soviet weapons he also would reduce Soviet influence on Hanoi, thus reducing the chances of ending the war.

Meanwhile, North Vietnam has worked out an agreement to take title to Soviet supplies on the Chinese-Russian border, Since the arms technically would belong to North Vietnam, the Chinese reportedly have agreed to permit their shipment across China.

It's a dilemma difficult to explain to Senate armchair strategists who see everything in simple terms.

Here are some of the details of the recent highly important chapter in the peace feeler negotiations:

In January, various friendly diplomats both in Asia and Europe had advised American diplomats that they felt North Vietnam would be amendable to peace talks, and advised that the timing should coincide with the Tet truce period.

Accordingly, the State Department on Jan. 24 began drafting a letter to Ho Chi Minh. The letter was written with great care and rewriten several

The Soviet government, at this point, exerted its influence and Premier Kosygin appealed to Ho personally. Kremlin leaders had given the White House their considered advice on how to approach Hanoi.

Reason for this unusual Soviet-American cooperation, of course, is that both countries have the same long-range policy in Asia, namely containing China within her present

Apparently, the Johnson letter came in for careful consideration in Hanoi, and there was some evidence that it worried the Chinese. At any rate, American intelligence learned that a North Vietnamese delegation went to Peking early in February to assure the Chinese that they would not be influenced by the Johnson peace feelers. The war, they said, would continue.

For six days President Johnson waited for a reply. Meanwhile, U.S. observation planes, flying over North Vietnam, took pictures of loaded trucks traveling bumper to bumper across the demilitarized zone into South Vietnam. The Joint Chiefs of Staff urged him to resume bombing.

Finally on Feb. 13 It became clear that Ho though not yet responding to Johnson's letter would turn it down, for he replied negatively to a peace appeal from the Pope. One day later, the President ordered a resumption of bombing.

Ho's negative and rather abrupt reply to the President was actually delivered on March 15, but the President did not make it public, even though it would have answered his critics, including Bobby Kennedy. Publication, he figured, would freeze Ho Chi Minh in his negative position, and he hoped peace feelers could be renewed.

The Chinese, however, were eager to expose the correspondence, probably to embarrass Moscow which had helped provide the link between LBJ

So on March 21, under pressure from Peking, Ho released Johnson's

CRA Editorial Hit

The political reporter representing the Long Beach Independent and Press Telegram covered the CRA Convention in a manner that was excellent, carefully done and his published report well written. However, your editorial assumption, that because CRA members applauded some of William Penn Patrick's statements about Mr. Kuchel, the organization generally endorses his approach and his attacks, is commentary wholly unresponsible. Indeed, supporting either Mr. Patrick's methods or candidacy is probably the least likely course to be followed by the CRA, and to be realistic that fact would have had to be observed by your editorial.

Immediate Past President Dick Darling stated many times that if CRA's expressed opinion regarding Republican voters' sentiments favoring someone other than Senator Kuchel prove to be wrong at the 1968 June primary, he would be fully supporting the incumbent senator in his general election race. What Price Honesty?

EDITOR:

What has happened to the principle of honesty? You hear and read advertising that:

makes some really fantastic claims, and the man in the street is becoming more and more confused and consequently a prime subject for the "sucker" game. Specials are advertised at low prices and a customer goes in to check and finds himself strung up for 10 times the "special" price, particularly in the auto field. There are those who advocate this method of doing business by stating that "competition" forces this method, and as the market is a big one, they don't expect "repeat" customers and thus don't care. Business advertising is a field that is almost impossible to police, and as newspapers generally are sustained by this kind of thing, it is not considered proper to question the validity of an advertiser's claims. Of course, the "fly-by-night" operators and doorto door merchants are sometimes the abject of warning editorials, but those "established" firms with fixed addresses are left to tell as many half-truths as they wish

Push Final Plans for L.B. Job Fair Long Beach Chamber of it was established, the Commerce officials are putting a full head of steam this week to preparations for the city's two-day Job Opportunities Fair, to be held at the end of this

There are still private employers to line up-for the fair; and officials are sending out letters, making personal calls and otherwise following up on last week's briefing of 50 business executives at a special meeting at the chamber, where Los Angeles businessman

Chad McClellan spoke. The fair, which will attempt to mesh job openings with qualified job seekers while emphasizing onthe-job training opportun-ites, will be the first such event to be held here. And officials are moving ahead in the knowledge that there's no precise way of predicting its outcome.

"IT'S HARD to gauge these things," said one of the planners, "Neverthewe're quite hopeful," he added.

The fair will be held against a backdrop of successes in other cities-and some not so impressive experiences in others.

San Francisco, for example, had a job fair in 1966, and it is generally conceded too. that the event was an unqualified success as job fairs go.

"It was held on a weekend, and attendance was about 10,000," says Ernest LaBelle, assistant general manager of the chamber.

"THE LATEST reports, moreover, indicate that roughly 1,300 jobs can be traced to contacts made at the event," he adds. happy experience with its

happy experience wit hits

But Oakland officials made it a point to say that job fairs, while they can be spectacular, should be viewed as "only one link in a chain of events" leading to a full-fledged attack on unemployment.

Long Beach officials couldn't agee more.

They note that some job fairs fell flat because they were conceived and carried out as "one-shot deals," and because the failed to follow up on the initial groundwork.

THAT LONG Beach intends to avoid that pitfall and make its job fair the opening gun in a long-term campaign to reduce tinemployment here is evidenced by the chamber's new link to McClellan's Management Council for Merit Employment—a non-profit group that was formed after the Watts riots of August 1965. In the more than 14 months since council has helped significantly to reduce unemployment in south-central and east Los Angeles, and has brought a measure of hope to many Negroes and Mexican-Americans who, until recently, had little faith in industry's desire to hire and train them.

ONE OF THE keys to the council's success, Mc-Clellan believes, is its ability to cut through the usual corporate and governmental red tape and appeal directly to industry's top leaders for cooperation in placing minority workers where their talents can be utilized.

Increasingly, the nation is becoming aware of what LaBelle calls "two major national problems"-on the one hand, large numbers of hard-core jobless; on the other, unfilled openings for skilled and semi-skilled

In trying to solve them on a local basis, a number of cities have found the job fair to be a handy and dramatic means of launching permanent job-finding operations.

Yet the fairs are considered to have some important immediate objectives. · · ·

OAKLAND, for example, staged its job fair because it provided an opportunity "in a single place for a large number of employers and potential employes to meet face to face.'

It also "motivated the energies and enthusiasms of the employers, and pre-sented jobs and hope for advancement to the unem-

Nearly 700 fathers will be volunteer workers when Long Beach Council of Camp Fire Girls opens the 1967 adult membership en-rollment Friday.

Children Will Fete May Day in Three Parks

Children will celebrate three international May Days April 29, the City Recreation Department announced.

The entertainment in El Dorado Park, 2800 Studebaker Road, I p.m. will be called "A Day in Holland." "A Day in Scotland" is the theme of the event in Hawaiian Playground, 12350 E. 226th St., Hawalian Gardens, 1 p.m. Children will present "A Day in Denmark" at Coolidge Park, 352 E. Neece St., 3 p.m.

Kickoff meeting for the drive will be held Tuesday at Millikan High School. Goal is $15,000.

Area chairmen are Henry Lopez, George Thomas Charles E. Sands, Ted Rei-del, William Bond, Ken Lawson and William Watilo. Under the direction of the chairman, volunteer representatives will call on parents of each Blue Bird, Camp Fire Girl, Junior Hi Camp Fire Girl and Horizon Club member in the Funds raised will supplement United Way and the annual sale of nuts and mints to support the Camp Fire program in Long Beach, Lakewood, Artesla, Bellflower, Signal Hill, Dominguez, Dairy Valley and Hawaiian Gardens.

Orange Co. Farms Post $92 Million

Orange County agriculture, curtailed by expanding urbanization, remained a multimillion-dollar indus-try during 1966, Agriculture Commissioner William Fitchen reported Saturday.

The total value of county agricultural products for the past year climbed 2.9 per cent to $191,980,100, of which each of 14 different products accounted for a $1-million-plus gross in-

Heading the list were nursery stock and cut flow-ers at $16,151,700, Fitchen reported. High on the list were Valencia oranges, $13,319,000; eggs, $12,958,-100 and dairy products, $12,711,200.

Others Fitchen said, were strawberries, celery, tomatoes, green beans, sweet corn, dry beans, avocados, beef cattle, peppers and poultry.

CIVIC OPERA ROLES

Dances On, and Off Boxcars

By HAL LOWE

When Lonnie Rhodes of Bellflower comes home from work in the evening, he pulls a switch. Considering that he spends all day working with switches, the evening switch is a bit unique.

Lonnie, 31, works as a railroad switchman for the Union Pacific Railroad, but his first love is dancing. After work, he dons his dancing shoes and is off to rehearsal at the Long Beach Civic Light Opera.

THE BELLFLOWER High School and Long Beach City College graduate has been dancing since he was 9 years old. His parents put the awkward lad in a dancing school, where he not only developed his sense of balance and timing, but acquired a taste for dancing.

"My father has worked for the railroad for 21 years" Lonnie suid, "That is proof to me that it's a lot steadier job than dancing for a living." But, while dancing over the switches and up the sides of the box cars, during the day, Lonnie said, "I do a comedy dance routine which would be good for night clubs, but for the steady job, I'll stick to railroad biz." HIS FELLOW workers at the railroad yards have no particular nickname for the dancing switchman, but he does not do too much dancing when he is working. "You have to keep alert when you are dancing around on top of those big box cars. The wrong foolwork there is a little more dangerous than on a stage."

Many fellow switchmen will be in the audience when Lonnie dances for the Civic Light Opera, in "How to Succeed In Business Without Really Trying" on May 4. They'll be able to tell if Lonnie's switch from box cars to a stage is an improvement.

Park Fund Conversion Plan OKd

The Los Angeles City Recreation and Park Commission has announced it has approved a plan allowing conversion of Peck Trust assets into cash for development of San Pedro park projects.

When the estate of George H. Peck was turned over to the city in 1962, it was valued at almost $1.8 million. Since then, the commission said, about $400,000 of that amount has been used to provide for improvements at Peck and Leland Parks.

Pending a determination as to the uses of the estate by the commission, much of the money had been invested in securities.

Lease Signed for a New Post Office

U.S. postal officials have signed a ground lease that clears the way for construction of a new Santa Fe Springs Post Office in the city's Town Center at Telegraph Road and Pioneer Boulevard, Congressman Chat Hollifield informed the city council.

The 11,750 square foot structure will replace the pesent 3,000 square foot facility in the Santa Fe Srpings Shopping Center on Orr & Day Road at Telegraph Road. Estimated cost has been set at $200,000. The city will have jurisdiction over the architectural design of the building to assure compatability with other structures in the civic center.

Astrologist Says Planets Best Guide

By BARBARA KNESIS

She speaks slowly and with conviction on a variety of topics.

"No, Gov. Reagan will never become president of the Unites States.

"Yes, the United States will be out of Viet Nam by 1969."

The young woman in the know is Renata Showmacker, 29-year-old German-born astrologist and numerologist who sees a return to the days when heads of state consulted the planets.

Miss Shoemacker, contending there is nothing mysterious about her peeks into the future, say she doesn't have to look in the cards or the tea leaves or even the eyes.

"An astrologist doesn't dream or imagine. He simply uses the knowledge of planetary configurations. It is nothing but statistics," she says.

Elaborating, the selftaught Costa Mesa astrologist explains that every planet in itself has many meanings. Its location, likewise, holds other secrets, she says.

An energetic warrior in the battle to legalize astrology, the blonde-haired, blue-cyed Miss Shoemacker says it will probably take a couple more years.

"Saturn, the planet of delay, and Uranus, the planet of action, are in opposition in the galaxy and during this period it can not be legalized," she says. Still she forges ahead in the fight. ,

Besides this, her biggest objective is to have teachers, nurses and mothers make use of astrology in guiding people.

Astrology, she says, can be used to see if a child has an aptitude in a certain field. It can also be used to understand why some people are the way they are.

Miss Shoemacker, who has had more than 800 persons visit her home since coming to the Unites States in 1964, says they included ministers, psychologists and even engineers who wanted to learn out to computerize astrology.

Most of the women who frequent her home, she says, come with romantic problems.

Benjamin Britten's 2-act a "The Rape of Lucre-in a spacious and rich production designed by Alfred Siercke and staged by Guenther Rennert, and played without intermis-sion, was the fourth offer-ing in the current Pavilion stand of the touring Metropolitan Opera National Company. It was given a single showing Friday

Britten's opera seems to stand a short test of time better than, say, Menotti's, and the 21-year-old, 100-minute "Lucretia," is no exception. Its tight dramatic scheme, the flow of Ronald Duncan's libretto, and the expressivity of Britten's music, are still tlmely and dramatically credible.

In the visual poetry of Siercke's sets and costumes, the engaging styllzation of Rennert's staging, and the sweep of Robert LaMarchina's musical direction, the work could hardly be better served. Only one flaw marred our rediscovery of its convincing theatrical fabric-the consistent failure of the cast to pronounce clearly. OTHERWISE, the production is probably the most successful of this season's Genuinely Funny 'Virginia Woolf'

By RALPH HINMAN JR. Drama Critic

Somewhere, somehow, something was overlooked in the recent national hullabaloo over blue language and assorted sex scenes in "Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf?"

Yes, as dozens of clerics and other commentators observed, it's a highly moral play, even though every other line is either a curse or a suggestion.

It's also genuinely funny-as I discovered when Hillcrest Players opened their production of the Edward Albee drama Saturday night in Harbor City.

Director Webb Graves' fine cast frankly milked the dialogue-and some of it is rather gamy-for every boff and vuk. Other stage versions usually—as was done in the movie-treat the selfsame lines with the dignity and deference accorded a classic Greek tragedy.

. . . . Full-scale laughter instead of nervous titters was the result.

Graves, when braced by this critic, swore he changed. deleted or added nothing to the original script. It was instead, the machine-gun pace set throughout, and I think, a new emphasis given George, the henpecked husband, which created the humor.

History professor George, who was being groomed to replace his father-in-law as president of a jerkwater college, here is not the standardized downtorodden worm. Instead, Joe Cunningham comes through clearly enough as a man long since determined to resist his neurotic and frustrated wife's nagging.

Sue Hirdler as Martha is earthier than most actresses In the role, Which means that when the final climax arrives, when she must face the inevitable moment of truth, her grief becomes more poignant.

Kathy Hooker and Danny Allingham, portraying the young faculty couple, did sterling jobs. Her breakdown when truths in her own background were revealed was superb. Allingham flawlessly maintained his blase, manof-the-world attitude until precisely the right moment to

As has been noted many times, comedy often punches home a message more strongly than tragedy. While "Virginia Woolf," funny though it may be, can never be considered a comedy, the Hillcrest production unfalteringly

"Truth or illusion—who knows the difference?"

And, even though fallible mortals may remain ignorant of the difference, they must never cease trying to find the distinction.

The show continues Fridays and Saturdays through May 13. Persons under 18 unaccompanied by parents will not be admitted

Her singing, if one can separate the histrionic and the musical uses to which she puts her voice, is superb, her stage presence commanding.

She is well seconded by female contingent— Clarice Carson as the singular chorus (Chrls Lachona is the male counterpart), Ellen Berse as the nurse. Linda Newman as the maid.

We will not see Miss Carson's Countess, or her Violetta, but from the evidence of Friday, we should guess they are, tonally at exceptional. The voice is large and quite attractive-perhaps the most attractive soprano instrument in the company.

PRESS-TELEGRAM!

Your first position at the Long Beach Naval Shipyard can launch you on a satisfying, stable career. As early responsibilities are assigned to bring out your potential, you'll have every opportunity for promotions based on your own merit. (Over 95% of our supervisory positions are filled from within.)

Complementing our program of personal development, we offer good salaries, excellent working conditions, further education and training, continuous challenges and personal recognition. Additionally, many of our over 300 vacancies, including those for engineers, offer Federal Service fringe benefits which include the security of health and life insurance and a liberal retirement program. You'll also earn 13 days sick leave, 8 paid holidays, 13 to 26 days paid vacation each year and the uniqueness of voluntary transfer to other Federal activities while retaining both seniority and fringe benefits. Reservists are entitled to additional leave with full pay.

Apply today or this week for sure . . . we may just have that BETTER CAREER you've been looking for!

Mitchell Death Ends 4-Year Moratorium

THE WEST

By DON HASTINGS

At 10:16 a.m. Wednesday, Aaron C, Mitchell was pronounced dead and a four-year moratorium on executions in California ended.

Mitchell, a 37-year-old Negro, was convicted of murdering a policeman during a Sacramento holdup in 1963. Gov. Ronald Reagan Tuesday refused to grant him executive clemency, as had Edmund G. Brown when he was governor. The U.S. Supreme Court already had denied him a hearing and an 11th hour appeal to Supreme Court Justice William O. Douglas went unanswered.

The condemned man went limp as he was being led from the holding cell on San Quentin's Death Row and was half carried, moaning, into the light green, steel execution chamber. He was strapped into the chair at 10:02 a.m. as 58 witnesses watched through five large windows. Mitchell looked dazedly at the faces in the windows and nodded to one, his family minister. The cyanide pellets were dropped into a vat of sulphuric acid beneath the chair at 10:04 and the deadly gas fumes filled the chamber.

Opponents of capital punishment maintained vigils outside the governor's residence in Sacramento and San Quentin Prison Tuesday night and until the execution was completed. Among those protesting were beaniks and businessman, hippies and clergymen.

AS MITCHELL WENT to his death, the state Senate Governmental Efficiency Committee was holding a hearing on a bill by Sen. George R. Moscone, D-San Francisco, to abolish the death pentity in California. Doors to the hearing room were locked after the crowd overflowed the 300 seats in the room. The hearing was picketed by more opponents of capital punishment.

Two hours after the execution, the committee, by split voice vote, rejected the bill. It was the 20th time since 1933 that a Senate committee has blocked repeal of the death penalty.

REPEAL OF the Rumford Open Housing Act was voted by the state Senate, 23-15. The repealer now goes to the lower house where it faces a "pretty rough road," according to Assembly Speaker Jesse M. Unruh D-Inglewood.

In the Senate vote, which came after 80 minutes of heated debate, all 19 Republicans voted for the repeal, 15 Democrats opposed repeal, four favored it and two were Democrats supporting repeal were Senate President Pro Tem Hugh M. Burns, Fresno, now listed as primary author of the bill, and Sens. Joseph M. Kennick, Long Beach: Randolph Collier, Yreka, and Lawrence E. Walsh, Los Angeles. All pointed out that 4.5 million Californians voted in 1964 for Proposition 14, which in effect nullified the Rumford Act, and 2.3 million opposed it. The senators saw this as a mandate.

The Rumford Act forbids racial, religious of national origin discrimination in the sale or rental of publicly assisted housing or any apariments with more than four units. Proposition 14, besides nullifying this, barred the legislature from enacting such laws.

The state Supreme Court has ruled Proposition 14 unconstitutional, but this decision is now on appeal before the U.S. Supreme Court.

One of the major roadblocks for the Rumford Act repealer in the Assembly is expected to be the Assembly Governmental Efficiency and Economy Committee. The committee, headed by liberal Assemblyman Lester A. McMillan, D-Los Angeles, consists of five Democrats and four Republicans. Three of the Democrats are Negroes. It is expected that an attempt will be made to bottle up the legislation in the committee.

THE DOUBLE SLAYING of a Long Beach fashion designer and an electronics technician and flight instructor was still veiled in mystery Saturday after a week of inves-

The bodies of Mrs. Elaine T. Kirschke and Orville M. Drankham were found Sunday in Mrs. Kirschke's plush, canal-front apartment at 185 Rivo Alto Canal, Both had been shot in the head.

Mrs. Kirschke's husband, Jack Kirschke, Los Angeles County deputy district attorney in charge of the Downey office, was arrested Monday morning near Victorville as he drove toward Long Beach. He said he had been in Las Vegas over the weekend. Kirschke was held by Long Beach police until Thursday, then released with no charges filed. Investigators said they had verified that he had been in Las Vegas.

THE WAR

"It is impossible to say how long the war will last, I can't see any end in sight."

These were the words of Gen. William C. Westmoreland, U.S. commander in Vietnam, who told an interviewer last week that his battle plan will continue to be to chew away at Communist manpower and material resources "until Hanoi wakes up to the fact that they have bled their country to the point of national disaster for several generations. . My strategy is to put the pressure on the enemy everywhere and that includes the major bombing campaign in the north."

The U.S. Military Command in Saigon reported that casualties on both sides dropped during the week ended April 8, with 177 Americans killed in action and 1,345 wounded, compared with 194 killed and 1,679 wounded the previous week. The estimated toll of enemy slain was 1,478, compared to 2,449 in the preceding seven days.

The week ended in Vietnam with another air war tragedy as two U.S. Air Force jets on a close support misssion bombed South Vietnamese troops by mistake in early morning darkness Saturday.

South Vietnam's Military Headquarters said 41 soldiers were killed and 50 wounded. The U.S. Command said 20 South Vietnamese were killed and 41 wounded in the incident 23 miles north-west of the central coastal city of Qui Nhon. SOUTH VIETNAMESE Premier Nguyen Cao Ky said Saturday that work has begun on construction of a forti-fied barrier south of the demilitarized zone separating North and South Vietnam. The barrier will stretch from the South China Sea to the mountains in the eastern sector of Quang Tri Province.

Quang Tri has been under increasingly heavy pressure from Communist forces.

Ky said about 20,000 persons would be evacuated from hamlets in the barrier zone. His use of the word "fortified" in describing the zone indicated it will contain field fortifications such as bunkers, mines and barbed wire.

ON THE HOME FRONT, Dr. Martin Luther King Jr., the civil rights leader, called on Negroes and "all whites of good will" to boycott the Vietnam war by becoming conscientious objectors to military service, King denounced the war as "morally and politically unjust."

King's stand was promptly repudiated by the 60 member board of directors of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, who described it "a serious tactical mistake."

Linking the civil rights drive with an antiwar campaign, the directors said, "will serve the cause neither of civil rights nor of peace."

THE NATION

While he went fishing off the Island of Bimini, (Adam. Clayton Powell's constituents in New York's Harlem district returned him to the House of Representatives with a landslide re-election victory of 86 per cent of the ballots

Powell could not campaign in the special election because he cannot enter New York State without being subject to arrest of criminal contempt charges. But'it wasn't necessary. Even his opponents conceded from the outset that there was no chance of beating the flambouyant preacher-politician who was denied his seat in Congress for misuse of federal funds.

Attorneys for Powell indicated he may not seek to be seated on the basis of his re-election, but may continue his court action to have his ouster by a 222-202 vote of house members nullified on constitutional grounds.

On Friday, the Justice Department made an announcement that may mean more lumps for Powell. A department spokesman said a full-scale investigation of Powell's alleged wrongdoing is under way.

The statement confirmed a report by Rep J: Herbert Burke, R-Fla., that Justice officials had moved beyond the state of initial inquiry into the affairs of the Democratic wheeler-dealer.

with no one wishing to go on record against ethical conduct, the House voted Thursday to establish a committee to draw up a code of ethics for its members. Although the committee is the direct result of the Powell affair, no mention was made of him during debate or vote on the

The ethics committee is to be permanent, but its powers presently are limited to devising rules for members, of-ficers and employes of the House to live by.

Lawmakers, traditionally, have been reticent to challenge each other's conduct, but Powell's peccadilloes prompted congressmen to to something to improve their

FEDERAL ADMINISTRATORS and private contractors involved in the Apollo moon landing project came under fire of congressmen investigating the launch pad flash fire on Jan. 27 which killed three astronauts-Lt. Cols, Virgil I. Grissom and Edward H. White of the Air force and Lt. Cmdr. Roger B. Chaffee of the Navy.

A special review board reported that contributing facto the accident included deficiencies in the design, manufacture and engineering of the spacecraft. Some members of a House space subcommittee suggested that the situation called for a thorough overhaul of the entire $23 billion Apollo program.

North American Aviation, primary contractor for the spacecraft, was criticized by National Aeronautics and affair. Actually, the refuse collectors had picked up a discarded Valentine advertisement.

Space Administration officials for a lack of dedication in the planning, design and construction of the vehicle. Appearing before the House subcommittee, James E. Webb, head of NASA,, conceded that there had been shortcomings, but said:

"NASA and its contractors have the capability to overcome every deficiency required to proceed on and successfully fly the Appollo-Saturn system and accomplish its objectives.'

THE SENATE EDUCATION Committee Friday rejected a plan to require state university and college students to pay $2,500 to $3,000 in total, four-year tuition KNX-Cherles Watta (to 4) costs-after they graduate.

The bill by Sen. John L. Harmer, R-Glendale, would have required students to sign a promissory note when they entered the University of California or a state col-

They would pay no tuition while in school, but after they were graduated and received good incomes, the deferred tuition would have to be paid.

Earlier, the committee approved a bill by Sen. Mervyn M. Dymally, D-Los Angeles, to set up a $500,000 state scholarship program to aid students from poor areas who may not have shown academic promise in high school.

ENGLISH PRODUCTS - an actor, an actress, a song writer and a film - stole the show at the annual presentation of Oscars by the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and

The British-made "A Man for All Seasons" was named best picture of the year and drew four other Oscars, including the best actor award for Paul Scofield of England: British-born Elizabeth Taylor was named best actress for her role in "Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf?"

Another Englishman, ex-jazz man John Barry, captured two Oscars for the title song and score of Columbia's "Born Free."

Scofield's win for best actor surprised many who thought the Oscar would go to Richard Burton for his role in "Woolf." If Burton, husband of Miss Taylor, had won, it would have been the first time in the history of the Academy Awards that a man and wife team had won.

The Burtons, neither of whom attended the Santa Monica Oscar ceremonies, apparently were miffed by his failure to win and refused to see newsmen at their villa on the French Riviera.

Other Oscar winners included Sandy Dennis, best supporting actress, for her part in "Woolf," Walter Matthau, best supporting actor, in "The Fortune Cookie" and Fred Zinnemann, best director, for "Seasons."

THE OSCAR SHOW is believed to have drawn the largest television audience in its history, partly because of the uncertainty about whether it would be televised. A blackout was averted when agreement on a new contract was reached between the striking American Federation of Radio and Television Artists and the three major networks just three hours before the presentations.

The contract between AFTRA and Columbia Broadcasting System, National Broadcasting Co. and American Broadcasting Co. provides for a weekly minimum guarantee of $300, plus 25 per cent of appearance fees paid when newsmen are seen on film or live broadcasts and telecasts. Management will keep the remaining 75 per cent of the fees until the minimum guarantee is reached. After that, the newsmen get to keep the entire fee, which usually amounts to $20.

It was the newsmen's demands for higher salaries that precipitated the 13-day, nationwide strike that also resulted in thousands of members of other industry unions staying off the job when they refused to cross AFTRA picket lines manned by nationally-known newscasters and

The presidents of 19 organization of American States nations Friday signed a far-reaching document that commits them to formation of a Latin American common market and a united effort to achieve significant advances in the fields of trade, education, culture, science and technology. The document is called the Declaration of the Presidents of America.

Ecuador's President Otto Aorsemena was the only chief of state attending the inter-America summit conference in Punta del Este, Uruguay, who refused to sign. He refused to sign because he felt the best solution to Latin American problems would be a U.S.-aided program patterned after the Marshall Plan for Europe following World

U.S. and Latin officials were almost unanimous in terming the three-day conference as of major significance to Latin American development and much of the credit for its success went to President Lyndon B, Johnson, who employed his informal "Washington treatment" so effectively that agreements were easily made among the other

PRIME MINISTER HAROLD WILSON'S British Labor party suffered a severe setback when voters gave the opposition Conservatives a landslide victory in the county council election in London. The Laborites had controlled the council for 33 years.

The swing to the Conservatives appeared to reflect working class resentment against Wilson's austerity program aimed at easing a chronic adverse balance of international payments. The program sharply curbed wage increased, among other things.

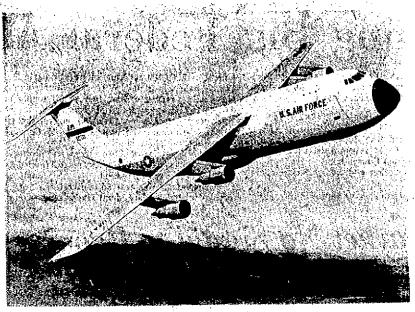

FRANCE THREW TOGETHER a fleet of 200 naval and civilian vessels to protect the beaches of Britiany from tons of floating crude oil.

The oil came from the monster tanker Torrey Canyon, which went aground off the coast of Cornwall last month. Part of her cargo already had fouled British beaches, rousing anguished outcires from summer resorts.

The Fench used sawdust and sand in an attempt to coagulate the floating oil patches and keep them away from fishing ground oyster beds.

Board of Equalization Calls Past 10 Years 'Decade of Progress' in L.B. Area

A fantastically successful decade of progress for the area served by the Long Beach office of the State Board of Equalization, highlighted by an increase in business outlets of 77 per cent, was reported last week by Richard Nevins, Southern California member.

Nevins disclosed a present count of 20,874 business outlets compared to 11,790 just 10 years ago.

The area includes the cities of Artesia, Avalon, Bellflower, Compton, Lakewood, Lomita, Long Beach, Lynwood, Paramount, Torrance, San Pedro, Rolling Hills and Wilmington, with a combined population in excess of

REFLECTING THIS GROWTH, the 1 per cent statecollected sales tax allocated locally to the area serviced by the Long Beach office, has also increased dramatically:

1967 Avalon$ 49,826 $ 26,990 Compton 1,434,636 1,193,559 Lakewood 1,479,646 591,038 Long Beach 6,182,456 4,518,925 342,405 Lynwood 534,579 Torrance 2,371,269 646,305

"As an economic baromiter," Nevins continued, "the taxable sales for the Long Beach area not only reflect the growth, but the 3 per cent state sales tax on these sales basically supports the local school districts. Taxable sales for fiscal year 1964-65 were $1.02 billion, rising to $1.4 billion in 1965-66.

EACH MONTH more than 2,200 taxpayers visit the office located at 4335 Atlantic Ave., which is one of 19

counts, employes have increased at a slower pace - from 37 in 1956 to 64 in 1966.

During the same decade the board has been able to reduce the cost of collecting $100 in revenue from $1.21 in 1956 to $1.03 in 1966.

Looking to the future, Nevins predicted a steady growth for the area. However, the board, with improved technological procedures and administrative reorganization, anticipates only minor staff changes to handle the increasing number of accounts and work load.

 \star TAXPAYERS with business tax questions or problems should visit or write the local office for information and assistance. The board has directed the offices to resolve issues at the local level as fas as possible in an attempt to assure prompt service. Keith Lauritzen is in charge of the Long Beach office under Nevins and James W. Tieman, who is district administrator for the counties of Los Angeles, Santa Barbara and Ventura.

New Home Construction Is Gaining Big Federal Ally

By KEN CHILCOTE Business Editor

New home construction, which felt the brunt of Washington's attack to prevent inflation two years ago, has become the fair-haired one in the administration's move to stimulate the economy and possibly prevent a full-blown recession.

Executive agencies that manage the economy appear determined now to put housing in the vanguard of their efforts in spurring business by assuring an adequate volume of money to provide credit for housing construction. Capital to finance housing is being made available by both the Federal National Mortgage Association and the Federal Home Loan Bank Board.

FNMA is now authorized to spend $800 million and the agency has lifted its prices and eased the restrictions it placed on mortgage purchasing during the tight money pe-

The Home Loan Bank Board which lends the savings and loan industry funds to meet mortgage demands at individual associations has made $1 billion in advances available to member associations in recent weeks, while reducing the costs of these advances.

THE BOARD ALSO HAS liberalized the lending regulations for federal savings and loan associations, showing a concern over that industry's ability to compete in the mortgage market.

The President's March 9 request on tax credit and accelerated depreciation removed a barrier to the expansion of multi-family housing construction, reports John de-Lalttre, executive vice president of the Mortgage Banks Association of America.

· While cheered by the government's efforts to revive a depressed housing industry and prevent a general recession of the economy, mortgage men see a painful recovery for housing and a continued softness for the general econ-

They note a 3.1 point drop in the Federal Reserve Board's index of industrial production for January and February with no great pickup indicated since then.

In general, buyers are hesitant in releasing funds and the pinch of taxes really is striking home.

FURTHERMORE, WHEN THE administration stepped up the Vietnam war efforts two years ago the move had far stronger backing on the home front than it does today. After pouring billions of dollars and thousands of American lives into that conflict without seemingly any peace in sight, a lot of the exhuberance has dwindled. Caution seems to be guiding the hands that control the public's pursestrings.

Otherwise, how can anyone explain the recent slump on the markets of some of the best stocks? Why have automobile sales fallen behind? There are many other such things hitting the nation's economy today.

And with the rash of strikes breaking out with threats of many more, business and industry both are losing a lot of heart in planning for the future.

If new home construction picks up the banner and gets a good program under way, will strikes slow up the efforts? Because the industry was dormant while living costs climbed the past two years, those workers are sure to expect improved pay when they get back to work.

It may be viewing the future economy in a dismal vay but it seems the only real boost we need is assurance that the Vietnam conflict is heading to completion. Then the economy would jump on every front.

DELAY IN GETTING REFUNDS from federal income taxes is putting a squeeze on many Californians who still must pay their State tax by Monday night. Thousands of folks have always used the federal refunds to pay the state

Computers were supposed to speed up getting those refunds but on every side you hear complaints about the delays. And the State will slap a penalty on the state income tax payments made after April 17, but the U.S. will not pay interest on the use of money due individuals on taxes overcollected last year.

PETROLEUM GEOLOGISTS ONCE MORE will be in demand - after a five year decline - but they will have to be of a different kind. There will be a place for the well-educated, competent, dedicated petroleum geologist either as a professional or as a manager," says T.T. Barrow of Humble Oil Co.

"As the search for oil expands to higher-cost areas offshore and to new foreign areas, a different type of geologist will be required.

"During the next 50 years the growing demands for petroleum products will require great exploration ingenuity and petroleum geologists of highest professional capability will be required to supply these demands. These professionals will obtain higher compensation with more status and prestige. The need for continuous education on a career basis will grow and much of the professional's time will be spent in maintaining his knowledge level at capacity."

ANYONE PLAY AN ORGAN WHILE wearing gloves? Sounds corny but that seems to be the first thought you get when Hammond Organ Co. announced it is acquiring the Wells Lamont Corp., a privately-owned manufacturer of work gloves.

Then the organ company disclosed it is changing its name to Hammond Corp., so it may better pursue a program of diversification.

Stanley M. Sorenson, board chairman, said: "While we plan no letup to maintain our leadership position in the electronic organ field and to enter or expand our activities in other segments of the musical products industry, our sights are set on other business areas with good growth

'The addition of Wells Lamont is the first of a number of anticipated steps in this direction.

FOR THE CLASS OF '67 turned out by the colleges, the members find themselves in a seller's market as far as employment goes. Industrial appetite for college trained personnel is at a record high. Since last June, corporation hiring goals are 53 per cent higher, according to a survey by Business Weck. In engineering the situation is still tighter. Last year companies obtained only half the engineers they sought; this year hiring quotas are up 103 per cent.

Non-business careers are luring more and more students. Peace Corns and anti-poverty programs provide the graduate to make a social contribution before he settles down to the hom-drum of a business life. Money now is secondary to a meaningful job.

A student's job values relate to his major courses. Those concentrating on the humanities and social sciences place money after challenging work. Engineering majors put pay first.

Matson Reporting Step-Up in Service

By JACK O. BALDWIN Marine Editor

Stanley Powell Jr., president of Matson Navigation Company, recently told a stockholder's meeting the company had a net profit in 1966 of $9,460,000-an increase over the previous year of $2,224,000.

Operating results for both the Hawaii and South Pacific passenger services and Matson Terminals, Inc., which included stepped-up sailings in and out of the Port of Los Angeles, improved sufficiently to offset a small decline in Hawaii freight earnings.

The company reports it will start unsubsidized West Coast-to-Japan cargo container service in September with two converted container vessels and will add two all-new vessels in 1968.

The shipping company executive said his company was in "excellent condition" to meet the challenges of expanding the Hawaii freight container service to the Far East and more rigorous competition in the West Coast to Hawaii trade.

EDWARD HORTON, WEST COAST manager for Ocean Science and Engineering, from his headquarters in the Long Beach Harbor Department Building, announced this week the company has opened an office in

The office will be headquarters of Ocean Science Philippines, Inc., a wholly-owned subsidiary of OS & E. The new company will be engaged in occan research and exploration in areas adjacent to the Philippines.

The oceanographic research firm now has four of fices in Southeast Asia: Saigon, Bangkok, and Lumpur.

DRIFTWOOD: Rumor along the Port of Los Angeles waterfront is that the port will soon seek the services of an oceanographic expert to keep pace with the Port of Long Beach in its push to make Long Beach the oceanographic center of the world.

The Los Angeles officials undoubtedly have eyed the early successes attained by Louis F. Jobst Jr., the Long Beach expert, in bringing several new oceanorlentated firms to his home city and port.

Homes in Pacific Sands Selling at Record Pace

A recent sales record of more than one home per day was disclosed by Chet Salisbury II, sales manager for Deane Brother's Pacific Sands community in Hunt-, ington Beach.

A contributing factor to the upsurge of home sales, he said, is the extremely attractive equity exchange plan offered on the three, four and five-bedroom homes, priced from $23,950.

Salisbury explained the trade deal as being a very important sales stimulus for many reasons. "Home buyers like the idea that they save on the expense of a two-way transaction because they deal directly with the Deane Brothers in getting into a new Pacific

Salisbury said: "Deane Brothers will appraise the buyer's old home and give him full-value equity which can be applied to the purchase of a new home in Pacific Sands."

LAW IN THE NEWS

'Probate Homestead' Valuable Safeguard for Widow, Children

The "probate homestead" is a valuable protection for the surviving spouse. It provides a home for the surviving spouse or minor children, free from the claims of creditors or other heirs. If a home is part of the decedent's estate, it must be set aside upon petition to the probate court.

The court cannot refuse to "homestead" the family home just because the wife already owns other property. In one case the husband willed a large farm and farmhouse to his wife, and left a residential property to his son by a former marriage. Wanting more, the widow asked the court to give her a homestead for life in her stepson's residential property. The court did so. The widow's right to a probate homestead is not reduced by her ownership would have required the widow to choose between accepting the inheritance (the farm), or claiming the probate homestead given to her by law, but not both.

The probate homestead goes to the window permanently if the home is community property. If it is the decendent's separate property, the court will limit the time she may use it. This period cannot exceed her lifetime, and generally will not go beyond her children's minority. The court may consider remarriage, her other assets, or changed needs in setting the length of her use. After that period, the property will go to the decedent's named heirs.

The probate court will "homestead" only "residen-tial property," but need not be used only as a residence. Part of it may be used for business. The purpose of the laws is to provide a "dwelling" for the family.

THE PROBATE COURTS

have set aside flats, or residences partly used for commercial purposes. In a recent case, the court allowed a widow to have her late husband's 30-unit apartment building, worth almost $250,000, where she lived in one unit.

But the court will not set aside money for the widow to buy a home. For example, in one case the only separate property the husband had was a large commercial building, He willed it to a brother. The court refused to require a sale of the building to set aside money for the widow to buy a home. Another court refused to set aside a piece of farm land despite a widow's promise to build a home and live there.

"We have had 61 new members accepted this year, and while this is slightly less than the same period last year, it is an in-dication of the business trend and speaks well of the fact that we have come out of the slow business period for last year," Abrams states.

"MULTIPLE listing sales are another excellent barometer of business conditions," Abrams continued. This first quarter of 1967 has broken all previous records with a volume of $10.265.394. — exceeding $10,265,394. the 1966 first quarter figure of $8,518,943 and 1965 first quarter $8,037,139. There were 494 sales recorded this quarter, and the higher per-centage of sales to listings indicates that properties are being listed realistically and sold.

Huge Riverside County Citrus Tracts Bought

Purchases of two-45-acre parcels in Rancho California's citrus area were announced last week by Robert L. Unger, general manager of the 135-square-mile Riverside County property.

Both sales, said Unger, were in accordance with Rancho California's land enhancement program which is designed to bring each of its 87,500 acres to its highest potential. To date nearly 8,000 acres have been purchased for development in accordance with the Rancho California master plan.

BOTH OF THE newly announced transactions were negotiated by Coldwell, Banker & Co. and Burt Chalmers, an independent Hollywood land broker who has negotiated the sale of $20 million of property in the greater Rancho California area in the last decade.

One purchase was by Robert C. and Patricia Wilson of Arcadia.

THE LOS ANGELES district sales manager for Aluminium Company of America, Wilsop hopes to hegin planting citrus or avocados this season, will later build a second home on the property.

Purchasers of the second parcel are Fred H. B. Ehrenreich, San Marino, presi-dent of Claude L. Murphy

Construction Co., and John Meyer, Newport Beach, president of Johnathon Manufacturing Co. Both plan second homes and will share the property as a family weekend horse ranch, in addition to planting citrus.

ITS TOO WIJCH HOUSE FOR THE

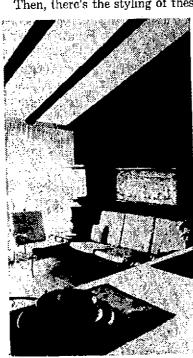

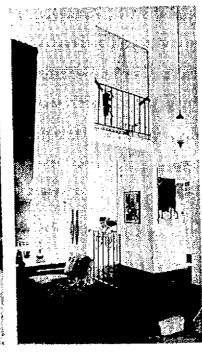

Some people may feel that our homes at Greenbrook are almost too good to be true.

For a starter, just look at their size.

Not one of these homes has less than 3 bedrooms. Some have 4, some 5, and some even 6. And they're all big bedrooms at

Then, there's the styling of these homes.

We put a lot of talent and imagination into designing the interiors and exteriors of these homes. We think you'll like what we've done.

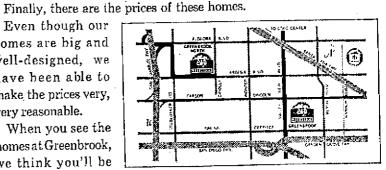

Outside, you will see a great deal of natural rough-sawn wood and Adobles brick. This gives our homes a warm, cheerful, comfortable look. Inside, you'll see styling like you've never seen before. Beautiful fireplaces, balconies, and "mile-high" living-room ceilings. (Several people have used the word "fantastic" to describe the interiors of our homes.)

Even though our homes are big and well-designed, we have been able to

Goofy's Day at Big A

Angels Lose Odd Game to Indians By ROSS NEWHAN

On the day of the Disneyland doubleheader, Goofy was present for the first pitch at the Big A and that was the name of the game played in Saturday's twi-

A crowd of 22,519 -15,000 of whom later traveled to the actual Fantasyland - sat under ominous skies to watch the Angels experience a frustrating 4-I loss to Cleveland in 10 innings.

Rocky Colavito, the $55,-000 bench-warmer, drove a pinch-hit single through the Rigney shift to tie it in the ninth and Fred Whitfield walloped a three-run homer off Nick Willhite to win it in the 10th.

Erased was a 1-0 lead which curvacious Jim Mc-Glothlin protected through 8½ innings; a double and single by Don Mincher, who is hitting .467 and fielding the same way.

Rick Reichert failed to catch a ninth-inning fly by Chico Salmon and a similar 10th-inning pop by Chuck Hinton as the Indians mounted their "shallow"

Joe Adcock thus emerged with his first managerial victory following some ninth-inning strategy which even Charlie Brown has never contemplated. "I suppose I'll always remember this game," smiled Adcock. "You'd just know that a first baseman would win it for me." It was, however, a case of the Angels losing it. "Whitfield didn't beat us," said Rigney, "Colavito did. If all he's going to do is pinch-hit, then we won't be able to shift on him.

"He was swinging for the hole. He was swinging for a single and not a home run.

We learned a hard lesson." McGlothlin carried the 1-0 lead into the ninth, having yielded only five hits.

With one out, Salmon lifted a fly into shallow left which fell at Reichardt's

"From where I sat," said Rigney, "I thought the ball should have been caught."

Caught in a bind instead, the 23-year-old McGlothlin hung his first curve and Duke Sims singled to right, sending Salmon, the tying run, to third.

Minnie Rojas replaced McGlothlin, who left to a standing ovation. Gus Gil, who hit .267 at Buffalo last year and was 1-for-10 this week, was the batter and all awaited Colavito's appearance.

. AND ANOTHER INDIAN BITES THE DUST

Cleveland Indians' Fred Whitfield simply tried to go too far against Angels Saturday, attempting to reach third base from first on single by Leon Wagner. Centerfielder Jay Johnstone fired to third baseman Paul Schaal, who nailed Whitfield with desperate leap. Umpire is Lou DiMuro; coach is Del Rice. Indians went on to win in 10 innings, 4-1.

Filly Flashes Pitchless and Punchless to Alamitos Derby Upset -- Dodgers Still Winless

Toy Spur, one of the others in the race, survived a blanket finish and won the $42,700 Los Alamitos Derby Saturday.

Sompin Special, who lost one division of the Trials last week by a similar margin - two inches, received $9,607.50 as the runnerup. Truly A Lady gained $5,337.50 and Lano Hancock $3,202.50.

Sumpin Special continued her fantastic success by placing in the money for the 18th time in 20 career starts. Lano Hancock, on the other hand, saw a string end when she finished fourth, the first time in eight races this year she had not won or placed.

Toy Spur was one of the longer shots in the race and returned $25.20, $8.60 and $6.00 to her backers in a crowd of 14,903.

make up only three places by the finish.

A record $139,168 was bet on the featured eighth race with most of the money going to Lano Hancock.

Mayola's Pride won the sixth race in 17.9 and Scor-pion Dandy matched that in the seventh to tie Duplicate Copy for the fastest time of the meeting.

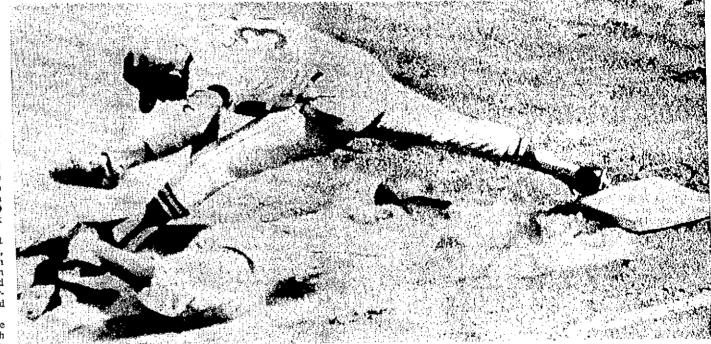

Scorpion Dandy entered the seventh race off the biggest winning margin in Los Alamitos history. On April 11, he sailed 350 yards down a muddy track to a five-length victory.

He was running against six other winners Saturday, but was still a casual length ahead at the finish. William Straus picked up his second win of the day riding Scorpion Dandy, who returned $3.40, $2.80, $2.40.

For the third successive day, a trainer won both ends of the daily double. Saturday it was Dave Newby's turn and he conditioned first race winner Thanks 'Doc ($9.40) and second race winner Bright

Sun Deck ($9.00). For the second time in the same three days, the same jockey won both ends of the double, Ronald Banks doing the honors Saturday. The daily double returned $52.80.

The afternoon had a touch of novelty prior to the fourth race when Luckey Starlet bolted as the horses were moving up the track, jumped over the infield fence and scampered around for nearly five minutes before being corraled by outrider Danny Knight.

LAS VEGAS - Although Frank Beard is two strokes ahead of Dan Sikes and four in front of Jack Nicklaus, anything can happen on today's final round of the Tournament of Champions as the bespectacled Kentuckian tries to complete a wire-to-wire victory under miserable golfing conditions.

Play in the desert classic at the Stardust Golf Club, which was blasted by winds of more than 45 moh Saturday, will be marked by more wind today . . . althought the weatherman. says it will be "less gusty."

However, the golf stars have no confidence in his prediction after he had forecast gentle winds of no more than 15 mph for Saturday's round.

As it turned out, it was rated the second worst day the touring pros have experienced in Las Vegas.

Beard jumped off to a two-stroke lead with a 65 on Thursday, boosted his advantage to three with a 68 Friday and maintained a two-stroke edge Saturday despite a three-over 74 for a 54 hole total of 207, six under par for the tournment.

Sikes, the golfing lawyer from Florida, made up one stroke on the leader with a 73 and stands at 209 heading into the final round

Nicklaus, meanwhile is in third place at 211 after a four-over 75.

Only one other golfer is under par for the three rounds-Argentina's Roberto de Vicenzo at 212.

De Vicenzo posted that day's only sub-par round, a brilliant three-under 68 highlighted by an eagle-3 on the 15th hule. Only two others were able to card even-par rounds of 71 Saturday - Billy Casper and Bert Yancey, but both are still far back after costly rounds on Friday.

Tied for fifth at even-par 213s are Gay Brower (74) and Doug Sanders (77) while defending champion Arnold Palmer had a 74 to drop eight strokes off the pace at 215.

Palmer's round was marked by three sixes, one a double bogey on the 12th after placing his 1-iron approach on the back fringe of the green not more than 20 feet from the cup, Showing what kind of a day it was, it took Amie four strokes to get down from that point.

It appeared as if several would shoot in the 80s at one stage, but it was considered miraculous that the high scores of the day were 78s posted by Art Wall and Don Messengale. Three others had 77s - Sanders, Al Geiberger and Bob Goalby.

Beard had another scrambling ground,

He missed seven greens and no less than five birdie putts of less than five feet, including a 2½-footer on the 18th, and conceded, "My score is rather remarkable in view of the weather conditions and the way I played."

Two of the greens he missed led to bogeys on the 4th and 7th holes, and he three-putted 16 and 17 for two more, while sinking an eight-footer for his lone birdie on the 13th.

Frank admitted that he had a fortunate break on the 11th hole which enabled him to retain his role of pa-

"I could have lost my advantage right then and there when I put my tee shot out of bounds," he revealed. "There was no question but what it was out. However, it hit a spectator and bounced back in bounds by about 12 inches. I was then able to save my par."

tator was not injured seriously-in fact, remained in the gallery to the bitter end

Beard said that the spec-

Sikes had six bogeys and four birdies in an erratic round on which "I didn't get a par from 11 on in. It was either birdied or bogcy for me."

Sikes said, "You have to save a lot of hard pars to make any kind of a score on a day like this. I wasn't making them, and I was lucky to get four birdies to keep me up there."

A 20-foot putt on No. 12 and a 10-footer on the final hole previded him with his key birdies after the wind kept carrying his iron shots to the greens wide of their targets. For instance, the wind carried pitches into 16 and 17 at both where he took back-to-back bogeys.

Nicklaus missed several short putts on the front nine which hurt, then went into the water twice on the backside, on 13 for a bogey and again at 18. However, he salvaged his par on the last hole after dropping out with a magnificent pitch shot to within a foot of the cup.

"And you know," he said, shaking his head. "I almost missed that putt."

had 32 rebounds, in the 76ers' 141-135 overtime defeat of the Warriors Friday night, was nursing a chest cold. San Francisco forward, Fred Hetzel, could just about walk after the game, suffering a combination of ills including shin splints, tendonitis and a sprained ankle.

Rich Barry, who took scoring honors with 37 points, was tending to a bad ankle.

Chet Walker, elbowed by Jeff Mullins, suffered a cut forehead. After the game, he was taken to Temple Hospital where several stitches were used to close the wound.

Outside the physical ailments plaguing both teams, everything was just fine for the second contest today.

But, 76ers coach Alex Hannum found another ailment to add to his worries - bad mental attitude.

"They had the wrong attitude before the game," he said. "But I think they now realize San Francisco is not an easy mark. They know now they'll have to play 100 per cent to beat them."

Even the loyal fans had a sort of ho-hum attitude during the Friday night game. Where earlier in the season they would cheer a field goal, they almost yawned during the first half of the game.

They were probably thinking of how San Francisco fared previously in Philadelphia. The Warriors lost all seven games played here since March of 1965 - every game this year and last year.

The halftime score - 73-65 favoring the 76ers - apparently lured everyone into overconfidence.

"But, the second half shook them," said Hannum, who added, hopefully, "their mental attitude Sunday will be quite different from what it was on Friday.'

Warriors mentor, Bill Sharman, wasn't overly wor-

If Hetzel, who with Barry is the key playmaker, is not in shape to start, Tom Meschery will take his place. Meschery played well in reserve Friday, rolling up 20 points.

"I don't think we could have played any better," said Sharman, "and, I think we'll play just as well Sunday."

Mermaid Braden Top Trojan Grid Surprise ing batters on the USC sented, although Braden's

By LOEL SCHRADER

The reciprocal trade agreement among USC coaches is creating an age of affluence.

Footballers Earl Mc-Cullech, O. J. Simpson and Jim Lawrence have given the Trojan track team powerful spring and hurdle help. Basketballers Bill Hewitt and Mike Maggard also are contributing to the USC track cause.

Ron Drake, holder of the Trojan pass-receiving record, and quarterback Steve Sogge are among the lead-baseball team, currently ranked No. 1 in the nation.

The latest trade twist finds Reid Braden, who came to USC from Cerritos Junior College on a baseball scholarship, making a strong bld for the No. 1 Trojan quarterbacking job.

Braden, baseball player of the year in the Metro Conference last season, wandered into coach John McKay's office after spring workouts were under way and asked for a tryout. An o'liging sort, McKay con-football credentials from Cerritos were not particularly impressive.

"He's the most pleasant surprise of the spring," McKay says of the 6-foot-2, 210-pound Braden. "He has a fine future in football."

"Braden is an excellent time between the football and baseball fields, but is due for a close look the remainder the spring and in the fall.

"Bradne is an excellent thrower and gets back very fast to set himself for a pass," McKay says. "We think he's going to play a great deal of football for us next fall."

The Trojan baseball team had a game Saturday afternoon, so Braden was not on hand for a 90-minute scrimmage that produced the following comments from McKay:

-"We need a split end badly. A year ago we were in good shape. But Drake is out for baseball, Rich Leon has a plate in his leg from the injury he sustained at Miami last fall, and Phil Turman has gone on a Mormon mission for two years." I'l think Mike Holmgren (sophomore quarter-back) is doing very well.

There's no question he can very fine football player. He won't practice football mily more this spring. He'll concentrate on track." The Trojans will take a week off before heading into their final 10 drills of the spring. The annual spring game will be held

LAS VEGAS - Friday was a windy day even for Las Vegas as gusts ranged from 15 to 20 mph. And the weather forecast for Salurday was for "more gentle winds."

But they were far from being "gentle." In fact, the Tournament of Champions was whipped by the second most fierce winds to mar a PGA event in Las Vegas.

Gusts of more than 45 mph were officially re-corded, and it was estiworse than that at times. It never did blow less than 20 to 25.

Forecast for today's concluding round is for more of the same only "less gusty." And the golfers conceded they would "pray a little" that the wind won't be nearly so brutal and punishing.

Defending champion Arnold Palmer, who won the 1966 title with two fantastic wind-blown rounds, said that while Saturday's wind "was pretty bad, I don't think it was as bad as last rougher, in fact, the only wind which has exceeded this was the one which marred the second round of the Sahara Invitational last October as stars like Palmer, Billy Casper, etc., shot in the high 70s and low 80s.

And as Palmer sat in the press tent and watched more and more bogyes. being posted on the scoreboard, he shook his head and said, "I guess it is just as bad, at that. In fact, if I could sit here and let the others play, maybe I could catch up.'

Arnie is eight strokes off the pace.

Frank Beard, who held tenaciously to a two stroke lead, declared, "I've never played five holes like the last five. It was an awful experience.

Someone asked Jack Nicklaus, "On what holes did the wind bother you most?"

And the "Big Bear" summed it up masterfully when he replied, "One through 18. . . And I'm not kidding."

Jack went on to explain, You really have to work hard on a round like this, and it really takes a lot out of a guy." Jack, asked to compare the wind with those at other tournament sites, said, "You can't compare it with any except those right here in Vegas. When it makes up its mind to blow here, it really blows.

"In fact, they'd call this a hurricane down in Floriada. . . . and call out the Coast

Dan Sikes, a native Floridan, agreed. "I've played in 35 to 40-mph winds in Florida. . .but they're nothing compared to this."

Sikes, who is in second place two strokes behind Beard, declared that "I don't know what to expect on the final round. . .even it it's calm. Your game is gone after a couple of rounds in the wind. It throws the entire tempo of your same off and it always takes a while to get back your rhythm.

"Every golfer's swing is geared to a certain speed and when you get wind like this you have to widen your stance in order to keep your halance. Even so, I was blown off balance on several shots. In fact, 1 almost missed the ball completely on the 17th tee when a gust hit me on my downswing. The others had the same trouble.

"I hope I never have to play in anything like this again," Sikes added, as lie also revealed the club difference between Friday's round and the one Saturday was "as much on several holes as a sand wedge to a right, knotting the score.

Enter Sonny Siebert, the pitcher. With Pedro Gonzalez, running for Sims, on third Adcock allowed Siebert to hit. It wasn't until Colavito stole second with two strikes on Sonny that Jumbo Joe pinch-hit Lee Maye..

Given only one swing, Maye grounded out, concluding the phantasmogoric, setting the stage for further fantasy. Now Pete Cimino was the Angels' pitcher and Vic-Davalillo opened the 10th with a single. One out later, ifinton skied into the left field twilight zone and again Reichardt displayed retarded reactions.

"I felt I got a good jump," said Rick, "and I had a 40-60 chance to catch it. But I also thought that if the ball got past me Davalillo would surely score. I wanted to hold him on second, A fly like that requires inane sense and that's something I've yet to develop."

So southpaw Willhite was asked to face lefthander Whitfield. Nick, who passed out cigars upon becoming a father Friday, merely passed out when Whitfield jerked a high fast ball over the right field fence.

"He hit a baseball, that's about all I know," said Rigney, "Willhite didn't have anything on it."

Rigney was dumbfounded by Adcock's ninth-inning manipulations. "I thought Colavilo would hit for Gil and Maye would hit for Siebert," said Rig. "I also thought we'd win, It just shows you how dumb I am."

The Toros Take a Big Step

"Our boys are here as residents ... 16 players from 12 different countries, a team that's part of the commu-nity. They know it's not going to be easy, but they all feel they are here as missionaries trying to build this game."—Dan Tana, general manager of the Toros.

The slender, dark young man thrust the sports section in front of Dan Tana and pointed quizzically at Los Angeles in the National League standings, then at himself.

Tana shook his head, spoke a few foreign words and the lad shrugged his shoulders and walked away.

"He thought that was OUR league," Tana explained with a smile, illustrating that if soccer players are confusing to our country, our country is equally confusing to

Nevertheless, the National Professional Soccer League, represented locally by the Toros, steps out boldly into its first campaign at the Coliseum today, determined to wedge room for itself in the United States' sports

"It will take a little time," says Tana, undismayed by early public apathy and a multi-lingual language barrier that makes public relations next to impossible. Not only are the Toros unable to communicate with the media; they can't even talk to each other.

It is suspected that a British player, Ron Crisp, was appointed captain because he was the only player who spoke English.

"Actually, two," Tana says. "Helmut Weiss lived here for a while, and four guys speak so-so English, but the other 10 speak Portuguese, Spanish, Yugoslavian, German, Hungarian . . .'

ONE CAN SEE the strain put on coach Max Wozniak, who can handle English, German and "a little Russian and Polish," but still comes up several languages

Obviously, the Toros don't need a coach; they need somebody from Berlitz just to run a practice,

"Max has done a fantastic job," Tana says, "He's been very patient. A couple of times during a game he wants to say a few thongs to the guys so he asks me, "Say this, or

"We say it in one language to one guy, in another language to a second guy and in still another language to a third. It looks like we're taalking too much, but we're only saying the same thing 10 different times."

Tana himself is a Yugoslav who came to America 10 years ago to open an Italian restaurant in Hollywood, so in a lot of ways he speaks his players' language.

"A change of climate, a change of food, the way we live here, a little faster than anybody in the world - these are the things they have to adjust themselves to. But being of foreign descent myself, I experienced the same things and it's easy to explain to them."

 \star \star \star THE NIGHTMARE of trying to make one's self understood through everyday activities in a foreign country -- handling strange money, conforming to odd laws cannot be minimized, but Tana feels the players and their families will one day feel at home as solid citizens. "The boys are taking private lessons in English," he says. "All of them are going, including their wives, and we are paying for this. Within a couple of months we'll have no problem."

For that matter, Tana says, the team is surprisingly close knit for one hand-picked from every corner of the world, mingling contrasting cultures and nationalistic

"We have very good harmony on this club. We have had no arguments, no fights. They have all blended as one. They all plan to stay here, make their homes here. They're

The question of how the players have reacted to U.S. fans can't be properly raised yet, because they haven't had that many fans to react to-some 5,800 total in three ex-

But Tana points out that, until today, the games have been exhibitions, and "they play exhibition games at home and draw two or three thousand, then open up the league with the same teams and draw 90 or 100 thousand peo-

Besides, Tana adds, "They feel that the people that have come to the games really know their soccer. They applaud when they do something good, and they boo-or whistle—when they do something wrong. So they know the public here is very critical and they have to give the

* * *

FOR THAT REASON, Tana feels that this league will have captured the public's imagination and be firmly established-with vital assistance from a CBS television intract-before the rival United Soccer Assn. gets off the ground.

That's the league, Tana pointed out, that bought its "sanction" from the United States Soccer Football Assn. and will feature Jack Kent Cooke's Wolves .. alias Ameri-

"I don't know what they're going to be tomorrow," snickers Tana, whose own team is appropriately backed by Dan Reeves, Cooke's hockey adversary, and Dan Mar-

All of the USA's teams will be imported intact from Europe or Latin America, "but they're coming here strictly on exhibitions," Tana says, "coming to see America for nothing. I've had foreign teams here myself, and they don't give you 50 per cent of their performance. "They're just finished with the season at home, they have quite a few injured players, they're trying out young talent and this is the best place, because if they lose any games it doesn't matter. It doesn't hurt their world prestige, and even the winner of this USA league can go nowhere except back home.

"There's no question that our players are here, and here to stay. We hope the public accepts the Toros as

Marichal Winless After Two Starts

ATLANTA (A) — Joe Tarre's two run homer off Juan Marichal in the eighth inning gave the Atlanta Braves a 4-3 victory over San Francisco Saturday.

The Braves' catcher slammed his second homer the season over the left field (ence with one out in the eighth after Mack Jones reached first when Marichal, covering the bag, dropped Tito Fuentes throw for an error.

The loss was the second for the Giants' ace in two 1967 starts.

Torre's homer sent the Braves ahead, 4-2, but the Giants came back with a run in the ninth on Ollie Brown's single and Tom Haller's triple before reliever Ramon Hernandez came on to choke off the rally. He retired pinch hit-ters Jack Hiatt and Dick Dietz, stranding the runner

Torre drove in a run in the fourth inning and scored on Clete Boyer's single, giving Atlanta a 2-1 lead, but a run-scoring single by pinch hitter Willie Mays tied it in the sixth.

Mays, who pulled a leg muscle Friday night, had not been expected to play.

Mays drove in Jim Davenport, who had scored an unearned run in the second inning for the Giants. Atlanta had seven men left on base and San Francisco had six stranded.

Marichal ended the Braves' fourth-inning rally by striking out two Braves. He got out of a jam in the fifth by fanning Hank Aaron, Mack Jones and Torre after giving up two

ELLIS JUMPS TO N.Y. OF NEW LEAGUE

NEW YORK (UPI) -Baltimore center Leroy Ellis became the first player to jump the National Basketball Assn. Saturday when he signed a 1967-68 contract with New York of the rival American Basketball Assn.

New York general manager-coach Max Zaslofsky said the 6-foot-10 Ellis is the fourth NBA player signed for next season. However, he did not iden-tify the other three.

Zaslofsky did not reveal the terms of Ellis' contract, but he predicted Ellis would "reach even greater heights with the ABA."

Ellis, an all-America at St. John's, played one season in the NBA with the Bullets and before that with the Lakers.

The ABA, which is scheduled to open its first season next fall, has been trying to attract established NBA players, using as bait a pen-sion plan it claims to be the best in professional sports.

Cubs Rap Pittsburgh Again, 7-3

PITTSBURGH (AP) Randy Hundley's two-run homer capped a three-run rally in the third inning, propelling the Chicago Cubs to a 7-3 victory over Pittsburgh Saturday.
The loss was the Pirates' third straight after an opening-day victory over the New York Mets.

After Lee Thomas' run-scoring single snapped a 2-2 tie in the third, Hundley smacked Tommie Sisk's pitch off the left field scoreboard clock, giving. the Cubs a three-run bulge. CHICAGO PITTSBURGH

WILL SOCCER SUCCEED OR FAIL IN UNITED STATES?

Toros Launch NPSL Season Against New York Today

By FRANK LIEBERMAN

Professional soccer in the United States . . . a success or failure? The above question might get a partial answer today when the National Professional Soccer League kicks off its initial season across the country.

Southern California's interest will center around the L.A. Coliseum where the Toros, winner of three be viewed on KNXT (2) consecutive practice games, take on the New York Generals at 1 p.m. A youth soccer Cup prelim between Sierra Madre and Torrance kicks off the festivities at 11:40.

Other opening contests today find California host-ing Pittsburgh at Oakland, St. Louis invading Chicago, Toronto at Philadelphia and Baltimore hosting Atlanta. The latter contest can also starting at 2.

While the Toros have conquered three NPSL foes in practice tilts, the Generals' lone game outing was a 2-2 tie versus Baltimore.

"We've learned a great deal from our exhibition games," noted Toro coach Max Wozniak while preparing for today's opener. "We're ready to battle everyone and I feel we have a good shot at the title."

Wozniak's main concern with the Generals, the physical condition of his team. Six members of the unit have been battling sore muscles or the flu. "I hope we'll overcome our injuries by game time. The same thing happened last week and we were able to," added the coach.

DR. FAGER WINS, WILL PASS UP DERBY

NEW YORK (UPI) — Dr. Fager, a Kentucky Derby candidate making his first start of the year, scored an impressive half-length victory in the $57,800 Gotham Stakes at Aqueduct Saturday.

However, Dr. Fager probably will not run in the first of the Triple Crown classics. Nor will the son of Rough in Tumble race next week in the $100,000 added Wood Me-

"Dr. Fager will not run in the Wood Memorial next week nor in the Kentucky Derby," said trainer Johnny Nerud after the race.

"The Wood Memorial is too close and the Kentucky Derby is not on his schedule, Unless Mr. McKnight (owner William) who is not here, orders me to, Dr. Fager will not run in the Kentucky Derby."

The colt humbled favored Damascus in a dramatic-stretch battle with the two horses racing head and head throughout the straightway. Dr. Fager pulled away in the final sixteenth of a mile. Pedigree pundits believed Nerud's decision was based upon the belief that Dr. Fager was a sprinter and that the son of Rough 'n Tumble-Aspidistra was not up to winning at 11/4 miles, the Kentucky Derby distance.

Racing almost shoulder to shoulder in the closing yards, Dr. Fager pulled away slightly to streak across the finish line in the fast time of 1:35 1-5. He earned $37,570 and paid $4.60, $2.40 and $2.40 across the board.

Arnie Stopped PGA Break Away

LAS VEGAS - In a recent series of articles on Arnold Palmer in a national magazine written by his business manager, Mark Scott, it was stated that Armie's loy-alty to the PGA kept the leading professionals from break-ing away from that organization and form their own major league golf tour.

"Arnie's loyalty led him to stand with the PGA, or at least not break with it at a time when he had every reason to denounce it for harassing him beyond all reasonable and logical bounds," Scott wrote.

Scott went on to say that "Arnold's concern with the attitudes and inefficiencies of the PGA led to some extensive exploration into the possibilities of a new tour.

"A big corporation guaranteed $4 million à year to sponsor the new golf tour of 30 top players with the stipulation that three of the players would be Palmer, Jack Nicklaus and Gary Player.

"The tour would have consisted of 20 events spaced around the Masters, U.S. Open and British Open, Presumably, our players would no longer have been eligible for the PGA championship. The reason for this, of course, was that the new group would completely divorce itself from

"Every tournament would have been on national television and the prize money would have been even greater than on the PGA tour. Each player would receive a guaranteed salary ranging up to $40,000 in addition to the prize money he won as well as the benefits of pension and insurance plans."

SCOTT DECLARED THAT "the reason a new tour was not established is that Arnold feared for the future of the PGA. He worried that any kind of a minor league tour, one on which the young players could develop their skills, might not survive.

"Thus, after six weeks of thinking it over, Palmer rejected the idea. Without him, of course, the proposed tour fell apart because of the stipulation he had to be one of the

We have given you this rundown because we were the first writer, at least in this part of the country, to reveal that the touring pros were thinking of setting up their

And Palmer, from the information we received at the time, was one of the ringleaders of the move . . . not merely one of the dissatisfied players who would go along

We first heard it from our good friend Howard Capps, former PGA tournament supervisor who originated the Tournament of Champions classic when he became the pro at the Desert Inn.

Howard has now built his own golf course in Northern California after making a fortune in real estate here in Nevada as well as Marin County in the Bay Area.

CAPPS WAS THE GREATEST tournament director in PGA history. He took charge of the tour in 1950 when play was marked by fisticuffs (really!); charges of laxity over enforcement of playing rules, and favoritism in pairings

Howard produced the tour rule book and from then on rulings were made regardless of the fame of the player and starting times and parings were made by a prescribed forniula.

The professionals themselves quickly realized that this approach was better for them and the tour itself.

However, as Howard told us in April of 1964, "I could see trouble brewing between the tour pros and the PGA as far back as 1951. That's when I dreamed up a plan which would solve a lot of problems if the two groups couldn't reach an understanding.

The only solution would be a 'Major League of Golf,' an operation independent of the PGA and ruled over by a commissioner beyond the influence of the players and therefore able to make logical and unblased decisions."

CAPPS' IDEA - THE SAME ONE which Scott speaks of in the article —would have included the 60 low scorers for a year signed to contracts for the major league tour of no more than 30 tournaments . . , thus leaving room for the traditional major classics.

The remainder of the players would be placed in a minor league competing for perhaps $25,000 to $35,000. Minor league tournaments would be sponsored by the big meet people and played in adjacent areas.

At the end of each season, the 15 leading minor tour players would replace the least successful 15 major leaguers. This method would insure rookies a chance of

The touring professionals began discussing Howard's plan in earnest late in 1963 and when trouble between the PGA and the players reached a climax at the '61 Phoenix Open in a squabble over TV money, they were ready to make the break and form their own circuit.

The only change from Capps' original formula was limiting the number of players on the new tour to 40. Later this was cut to 30.

AFTER MOST OF THE DETAILS were agreed upon by the leading pros, spokesmen for them asked Capps to become the "Czar" of the new circuit.

But as Howard told us, "it would be a nasty job for two or three years. I don't mind working, but I don't want any part of the politics and mudslinging the job would create until my efforts were proved out and appreciated.

"As Satchel Paige said when the umpire was attempting to hurry him to the mound as he was called on to relieve with the bases loaded . . . 'Look, ump, ot' Satch is in NO hurry to get in NO trouble.'"

Some dissension among some of the top pros shortly after Howard refused the job put the plan in jeopardy and several already were starting to back out when Palmer made his decision not to leave the PGA.

Today, there is no longer much talk of a split now that the PGA has given more control of the tour to the players in an agreement reached last year.

Lakewood Ladies Win

The Lakewood Country Club women's golf team has won the Southern California Publinx Golf Championship for the second year in a row, thus earning the right to "retire" the perpetual trophy.

Jody Woodward captained the seven-member team which included Dona Stewart, Donna North, Elayne Heinen, Maxine Boecker, Pat Jones and alternate Gladys Ellis.

The Lakewood femmes won six matches, the last three over Griffith Park, El

Otterson Signs Rhinos Pact

The Orange County Rhinos, Western Division members of the Continental Football League, Saturday announced the signing of two former Cal State Long Beach stars.

Quarterback Jerry Otterson and guard Dan Harrison were signed to contracts for the 1967 season.

nos last year and led the feam to the championship of the semi-pro Western Football League. Harrison played for the Winnipeg Bluebombers of the Canadian League last year-

The accent was on pitching as Leon Hooten and Randy Guesno stole the show. Rainmaker Hooten brought on dark clouds as the opener began and turned loose celestial dew in the eighth inning.

But the freshman held Rio Hondo at bay with a brilliant five-hitter, that included 11 strikeouts, to run his unbeaten string to five games. The Roadrunners scored an unearned run in the first but LBCC pulled ahead on Steve Smith's two-run single in the same frame and Walt Weller's run-scoring triple in the second.

The Vikes added three more in the sixth on Smith's double, Steve Turigliatto's single and cross-body block at second and a double by Doug Stodgel, who had five hits in nine at bats, three RBI, three runs and four stolen bases for the day.

Guesno, who hadn't pitched in nearly a month and had been a season-long cheerleader, made his first-ever Metro appearance in the nightcap. The tall righthander hurled the game of his life.

Displaying a dazzling knuckleball and jumpy fastball, Randy scattered six singles, walked five and struck out a season-high 16 batters.

His mates staked him to a three-run lead in the first when Dennis Parks and Stodgel walked and negotiated a double steal. Parks scored on an ensuing overthrow at third and Rod O'Brien singled sharply to plate Stodgel.

O'Brien scored two outs later on a Dale Duncan single and drove in the sin-gling-and-stealing Stodgel with a fifth-inning liner. Smith's triple to right-center scored Weller for a 5-0 lead in the seventh.

Guesno had fanned eight of the last 13 batters when he walked Gary Pinkstaff with two down in the eighth. Robin Grainger singled through the legs of a sun-blinded Smith at third and Duane Davies walked to load the bases.

John Carpenter ended the shutout with line single over first base. But Weller saved one run, if not more, by diving to block the ball and keep it in the infield.

Mr. Robinson Burns the Senior Tee Trail Special to the I, P-T

You would take him for a man about 50 when you see drive along, arrowstraight shot off the first tee at Virginia Country Club. But something in the confidence and pure technique of this silver-haired golfer tells you that he's a man who has played for many years and is used to winning big.

Franklin Robinson, at 77, has been burning up courses all over the west-ern United States in the past few years. Most recently, he won low gross in his class with a 76 at the 32nd Annual Palm Springs Golf Championship Tournament. He did this while encased in a sacroiliac brace because of recent surgery. The fact that this was his fourth senior championship in less than a year's time is even more amazing.

In August of 1966, Robinson competed with some 200 golfers in Portland's Western Seniors' Tournament to win both low gross and low net in his division. Heading southward in Franklin Robinson is a past-president of Virginia Country Club and was instrumental in introducing electric carts to that course. "Carts are proving such a blessing to the senior players, there is no reason why anyone should not play good golf as long as he lives," according to Robinson.

It helps a little, needless to say, to have a fine talent. to start with. While he was a pre-law student at Columbia University, he worked summers as a hotel clerk in the White Mountains of New Hampshir: where he was bitten by the golf bug. He went on to perfect his technique enough to drop from an 18 handicap to a 6 in less than one year's time. His handicap stood be-tween 4 and 6 at Virginia for more than 5 years and he was a long-time member of the club team.

Harbor Department Did Assist Pacific's Move

This columnist was a bit unfair to the Long Beach Harbor Dept. in last Thursday's column, in which [discussed the move of Pacific Sportfishing Landing from Harbor Scenic Dr. to Berth No. 221, inside the enormous new Pier J.

It was truthfully reported that Eddie McEwen, Pacific's general manager, and his partner, Arvin O. (Pop) Leavitt, were bearing the expense of the moving job and that the cost would run into five fairly goodsized figures.

However, a spokesman for the Harbor Dept. was quick to point out that the department was spending $33,000 to help Pacific. That $33,000 involves moving floats and securing them, foundations for the Pacific buildings, grading and black-topping of a new parking lot, utilities and various and sundry other smaller items.

And I am just as quick to counter with this column giving credit where credit THE THE PROPERTY OF THE PROPER is due. If Eddle and Pop had to pick up that $33,000 tab on top of the moving and DONNELL refurblshing expenses, they might have given up and called it quits.

Just to give you an idea of what is involved, let's break down the $33,000 this way: Floats and foundations, $14,000; parking lot, $11,000; utilities, $3,000, and miscellaneous, $5,000.

THE CAUSE for moving Pacific Landing from its Harbor Scenic Dr. location is the fact that the new Magnolia Ave. bridge will run from the foot of Magnolia to Harbor Scenic Dr., right on top of where Pacific has done business for so many years.

The same spokesman for the Harbor Department says the Port of Long Beach had nothing to do with that bridge; that it did not order it, but that he Long Beach City Council took the action. This may sound like an argument be-tween the right and left hands over a job to do, but there is a distinction between the actions of the City Council and those of the Harbor Department.

The spokesman also pointed out that when Pa-cific was moved from its last location to Harbor Scenic Dr., the Harbor Department spent $202,000 in 1956 for buildings, hoist, foundations, floats, paving,

Marie Marie Company (Marie Company)

And in another vein, he said that the big sign advertising the twin towers for Pier J, a relic of the World Fair that never materialized, was not paid for by the Harbor Department. In fact, he said that a private individual gave the depart-ment $5,000 to be permitted to erect the sign.

It seems to me that it's about time for somebody in the Harbor Department to destroy that sign; everybody must know the twin towers will never be built.

ALTHOUGH A bit belated in this column, the Southern California Tuna Club had its awards banquet at the Petroleum Club recently and William F. (Bud) MacLaughlin took home the top awards for the two heaviest marlin on three-six tackle. And, of course. publicized broadbill caught by Dr. J. Others winning trophies

Sons winning awards were Bill Truelove, George D. Williams Jr. and Craig Williams. Wives getting silverware were Claire MacLaughlin, Pauline Forbes, Lorraine Carlton and Marjorie

Figures told the story of the fishing year. Thirty-five marlin were boated as against 18 in 1965 and 55 in 1964. Seventy-five albacore were decked as against 78 in 1965 and 203 in 1964.

Market Finally Responds to Encouraging News Items

By JAMEST, McCAUSLAND

NEW YORK (UPI) --The Stock Market made plodding progress last week, waiting until the final session to respond to an accumulation of encouraging business items.

Trading got off on a lower note in a slow start Monday. Prices improved gradually in the remaining sessions. The pace, how-ever, dwindled until Friday's strong upswing.

Wall Street analysts attributed the lack of enthusiasm to the fact that many traders were holding to the sidelines to wait out any adverse effects of the highly anticipated and much talk's about lower first quarter earnings.

GRIM PROSPECTS for a nationwide trucking strike and railraod strike depressed the list early in the week but the trucking industry reached a tentative agreement and President Johnson delayed the rail

With these gloomy items out of the way, the market looked for encouragement and found it in such items as a rise in auto sales for the first third of April compared with the same period last year.

This marked the first time this year that sales had topped the 1966 pace for any period.

Lack of growth in the gross national product for the first quarter had been expected by most investors and was actually considered somewhat bullish by those traders who had been prepared for a slight de-

NEWS THAT the huge pileup of business inventoreis had halted during February also prompted buying as many experts have viewed inventory growth as one of the major barriers to economic resurgence.

The dip in steel output for week was generally ig-nored as the industry still hinted at improvement during the second quarter. Selected interest rate cuts, record retail sales for March and an increase in industrial output for the same month rounded out the fairly rosy economic news

Analysts said, however, that until more definite signs of the expected economic rejuvenation appear, the market's progress should be rather limited.

His humor tickles the U.S.

BRUSH BRISTLES, sponges, paper towels, yarn, glue, balsa blocks rope, freshly dug earth and drapery fabric are materials employed in a new line of Buzza-Cardozo greeting cards with three-dimensional effect.

By PAT McDONNELL Staff Writer

"The park commission has selected your back yard as a game reserve and your first shipment of buffalo will arrive at 3:45 a.m. next Tuesday."

If you've received this type of missive in the mail or an itemized bill for $5,530.46 from Arnold's Army Surplus then you've come in contact with the humor of cartoonist Bill Brewer.

At age 30, the California artist, has been a major influence in the development of the glib, sophisticated studio card for the past decade.

What kind of a person is it who can start a coast-to-coast wave of laughter with a two sentence gag or a cartoon character?

How does he live?

Is he a harrelful of laughs or a moody, temperamental artist?

Unlike the stereotype idea of the cartoonist gag-a-minute eccentric the well-dressed, articulate Brewer appears better suited to an executive board than a drawing board.

From 9 to 5 he brews ideas for humorous greeting cards in Anaheim where he's art director, writer and editor for Buzza-Cardozo, largest card publisher in the western U.S. But a good number of the zany studio cards you've laughed over in recent years have been dreamed up at night in the studio of his canal-front Newport Beach home.

Brewer's first critic, fan and aide is his wife Polly, who works at an adjacent drawing board on her free-lance card illustrations.

BRITISH BORN-in a Plymouth air raid shelter during a blitz — Mrs. Brewer attended Boston Museum School of Fine Arts and was a staff artist at Buzza-Cardozo before she married her boss in June, 1964.

Proof that a married couple can pursue careers in a related field is supplied by the Brewers who take a great interest in each other's endeavors and achievements.

In contrast to her husband's bold, brash style, are the delicate florals and dainty miniatures Mrs. Brewer creates for stationery and greeting While awaiting birth of their 16-month-old daughter, Ann, Mrs. Brewer created a collection of whimsical animals and composed rhymes for each. The comical creatures, dubbed Daphne Duck, Billy Bear and Timothy Turtle, originated for her un-born daughter now are under consi-deration by a national publishing

"Free-lancing has allowed me to work according to Ann's schedule," Mrs. Brewer said.

"Between diaper changes and naps, work on a series of flurals for the 1968 Christmas season."

Pablum and strollers may have temporarily replaced paints and canvas for Mrs. Brewer, but for Papa Brewer an average of four nights a week is spent at his studio drawing board.

"AN ARTIST has to work hard for his independence," he smiled.

"A new idea or concept in humorous cards doesn't strike only between the hours of 9 to 5, Frequently, I'm so occupied with the promotional aspects of a new line of cards that I'm removed from the creative part of the job for two or three days at a time.

"This is a field in which you can't afford to get rusty. When I'm at home, I can give my full attention to a sketch or gag line that's been in the back of my mind."

His first promotion to receive nationwide attention was "Nutty 'Nouncements" which started an epidemic of belly laughs and frantic calls to highway, telephone and park commission officials in 1964.

The engraved announcements of increased telephone rates due to savings on all-digit dialing or notification of freeway construction through one's

He did tell descriptively of VC atrocities.

OFTEN while traveling back through the nebulous lines, Holt and Father Russell would come upon villages torn apart by murder and hysteria.

"We'd see the ghastly, but familiar VC trademark. The decapitated head of the village chief placed in a coolie hat, the body of his wife covered by her babies' bodies. Without their chief, the natives would be reduced to wild ramblings. Theirs is an Oriental culture, with strength placed in the oldest and the wisest.

The Viet Cong know they can bring instant demoralization by murdering the chief. Their butchery is unbelievable.

WHO NEEDS AN OSCAR WHEN THERE ARE HOMERS TO BE WON? ... host Dr. Jerry Flint (left) in Count Dracula costume and Martha Schumacher, a dashing Stella Starr, watch as Dr. Rob Schumacher gets ready to thread projector with his contest film.

-Staff photos by Curl Johnson

BEATING HOLLYWOOD'S Oscar night all hollow was Dr. Jerry and "Pooh" Flint's annual Homer's Award party. They may not have had as many kleig lights out front of their home at 7009 Seaside Walk, but more winpers showed up. Homemade movie type winners, I mean.

The Flints invite home movie making friends over each year (this was third annual) to compete in their Homer's Award party. Each contestant is allowed to show just 50 feet of the best film he or she has made during the year, Secret ballots are cast by all guests. Awards are given for those appearing in the films and best actress this year went to Jean (Mrs. Lynn) Levy. Best actor was won by Mark Schumacher, 8, with his dad, Dr. Bob, accepting and his mom, Martha, applauding.

Homer for best story went to host Jerry and best director and producer honors, as well as best narration prize, went to Dr. Lynn Levy and darned if Jean didn't win the door prize to make them the hottest winners in Flint Academy history.

Guests wear costumes in the best traditions of Hollywood at its most outlandish. Dr. Don Willardson took best costume award for his horse opera cowboy get-up, complete with 10-gallon hat, a la Hoot Gibson, red chaps and vest to boot.

Door prize was billed "A Day at Belmont Shore" and includes dinner at Delmonicos, Hang Ten sundaes from Foster's Freeze, a bike ride for two, theater tickets (to the Belmont, I assume) and sun glasses — to name a few of the goodies in the package deal.

All this fun, plus cocktails and an informal buffet dinner hesides, wrapped up the night.

MOD, MAD marvelous parties, it seems, have been order of the week. Carol and Don Helmers and Bobby and Jack Vial co-hosted a love-in which was given in the yard of Bill Miller, 71-64th Place, neighbor of the Helmers.

Strictly tongue-in-cheek, it was done as a benefit for Alamitos Bay Garden Club's scholarship fund. Guests were neighbors and friends. Considering how everyone went for this one with glee, one guest told me "it's amazing how fast adults can get psychedelic."

Idea was to wear hippy fashions and, of course, to bring something to share with each other in the manner of love-ins. Carl and Barbara Martin brought a pel iguana, which some guests shared by petting and others shared by shunning.

Fran Soldini brought flowers, Dr. Tom and Sue which had as centerpiece a regular floor height lamp, was Thomason brought a pot of chili to share. Fred and Willy Peters were there and he said he figured bringing himself was generous enough. The refreshment table, which had as centerpiece a regular floor height lamp, was festooned with a hanana, a bowl of law breakers ("because they were sugar coated in such beautiful colors"), apples and heaven only knows what more.

Paints and paper were provided and everyone, but everyone, painted weirdo (and not so weirdo) posters to paper the fence. Some even painted their faces; those who came barefoot (what's a love in for?) decorated them, too.

John McNaughton wore a Hindu priest outfit in the tradition of Alan Ginsberg. Most everyone brought some kind of musical instrument to play or something to bang on. Dick and Betty Kolberg toled a one-man band instrument and Liz and Rod Stover brought trash cans to thump; Preston and Nancy Smith had their guitars; Rudy Saldana played a horn and wife, Joy, taught Tahitian

Brewer sees the universal acceptance of the card gags and cartoons through their application on TV and quotes in the press.

"To my way of thinking, satirleal cards have come of age graphically and editorially as a significant medium of American humor," he said.

"They've also served as a tremendous outlet for humorists. Herb Gardner, creator of the Nebbishes and author of "A Thousand Clowns," got his start in the card industry. So did Al Burns, originator of "The Munsters."

"UNTIL THE early 1950s, cards had been traditionally sentimental. The subjects of illness, birthdays and anniversaries had remained untouched by the satirist's wit.

"It was a shocker, a surprise to have a thing like your birthday handied with a wise crack. Now there's a humorous card for every occasion from 'my dog to your dog' to getting a

"Another key to their success is that the cards are as much fun to shop for and send as they are to receive.

Cards are this artist's favorite medium of humor

Brewer got his start in the industry In 1957 when he won a national contest for university and art school stu-dents. Judges were Steve Allen, Groucho Marx and Al Capp, As Campus Cartoonist of the Year, he received a trip to Paris and a free-lance contract with Box Cards, purchased in 1962 by Buzza-Cardozo.

Son of former CBS newswoman Thalia Bradford and the late Associated Press writer William Gaines, Brewer attended Art Center and Chouinard Art Institute, Los Angeles. He was graduated in 1960 from University of California at Berkeley.

"WHEN I was in college I never thought I'd make a career of the greeting card business," Brewer ad-

"But in the face of a diminishing market for magazine cartoons, the card industry has been the training ground for my generation of cartoonists that Disney Studios was for the Hank Ketchums, Virgil Partchs and Rill Mauldins of 30 years ago.

"I think the medium has fewer restrictions than other forms of humor might impose. Take my job, for instance, it offers a fine blend of writing, drawing, editing and art direct-

THE FINISHED product is the Colossal card, measuring 8 by 15 inches and boasting a three-dimensional, textured effect.

"A bigger format and higher price is the latest trend," Brewer said, "The public now accepts paying a dollar or dollar and a half for a greeting card.

"The industry has come a long way from the depression years when it got its first real boost. Then people bought a card when they couldn't afford to buy a present just to let the person know the thought was there."

Alpha Gamma Delta Award goes to Long Beach woman

Mrs. Logan H. Goodknight of Long Beach will be recognized as "Alpha Gamma Delta of the Year" during the Southern California observance of the sorority's International Reunion Day Saturday at Century Plaza Hotel, Los Angeles.

The award will acknowledge Mrs. Goodknight's service as president of Federation of Republican Women on council, division and state levels as well as of Chapter BD of PEO Sisterhood and Assistance League of Long Beach.

Reunion Day will be observed throughout the United States and Canada on Saturday, commemorating the sorority's founding in 1904 at Syracuse University.

ANOTHER highlight will be a fashion show with members of undergraduate chapters at USC and UCLA serving as models and commentators. Of special in-terest will be the undergraduate members selected on the basis of scholarship to study in foreign countries under the University of California Junior Year Abroad Program. The girls will wear costumes representative of the countries in which they will be studying - Japan, France and

EVERY THURSDAY IN THE PRESS-TELEGRAM, EVERY FRIDAY IN THE INDEPENDENT

By MILDRED K. FLANARY Food Editor

It may be ambiguous, but he's today's candidate for Chef of the Week and it's widely known he can't cook. In fact, we're told selection of Jack C. Satariano as a "chef" sent his entire family into hysterics.

However meager his prowess at the kitchen range, however, there's nothing lacking his business acumen. Satariano is sales manager of Eastman, Inc., which re-cently won the award for "outstanding dealers of office equipment for 1966." In addition, he has just been installed as president of Long Beach Sales and Marketing

Jack was born in Pittsburgh, Pa., and moved with his family to Detroit, Mich., when he was 6 years old. There he remained until he joined the Marines in 1943. Assigned to duty on the West Coast, Satariano and his high school sweetheart, the former June Fisher, were married. By the time he was discharged 31/2 years later, they had decided Long Beach was to be their home.

THEY BOTH ENROLLED at Long Beach City College where he served as vice president of the student body, was given the Viking award and was chosen one of three Statesmen. Satariano continued on at USC, graduating in marketing and merchandising. He joined Eastman, Inc., in 1951 as a salesman.

The family, which thus far he hasn't convinced he can even "build a sandwich," includes Drew, a Millikan graduate; Jill a fourth grader; and John, a kindergartner at

A proud past president of Cystic Fibrosis Foundation and still a member of its board, Satarino is business manager of LBCC Alumni, a past president of the Alumni Athletic Council and active in Elks Lodge 888.

As a family, the Satarianos enjoyed golfing, swimming and bike riding. They recently chalked up a 45-mile bike run to Corona in 3½ hours, which included two coffee breaks and one flat tire.

JACK C. SATARIANO

BAKED STUFFED ARTICHOKES

Three large artichokes. Wash well, break off outer leaves at their base - about 3 rows up from stem, Cut stem so artichoke is flat at base. Cut top of leaves off about one inch below tips. Take the center of the artichoke out (called the choke) — best done with a grapefruit spoon. Take artichoke between the thumbs and loosen the leaves by pulling outwards. Turn upside down, to allow water to drain out while preparing the dressing.

DRESSING

cups bread-crumbs cup grated Italian Cheese-Romano

1 tsp. garlic salt

1/2 tsp. pepper 6 thisp. olive oil

Blend all together. Stuff artichoke by starting in the center and fill outward by pushing the dressing down be-tween the leaves. Place I cup of water in bottom of casserole or covered pan. Bake at 350 degrees for 45 minutes or until heart of choke is fork tender. This will serve 6 by cutting in half with sharp knife.

Community program to feature students

Norton Dance and Voice Studio of South Gate will provide a special stage show at 8 p.m. Monday in Municipal Auditorium during a program sponsored by Long Beach Recreation Department.

Variety acts in ballet, modern jazz, acrobatic and baton twirling performances will be offered by students from 3 to 18 years old. Al Ross, studio director, will be master of ceremonies.

Frank Van Ee will lead community singing at 7:30 p.m. with Regenia Beam as accompanist. The Tyo Orchestra will play for old time and square dancing after the stage show. Joe Marshall will be caller. The public is in-

INDEPENDENT-PRESS-TELEGRAMA-W-9 Libraries marking week

National Library Week, which opens today, has as its goals the encouragement of good reading habits, the increased use of libraries and the expansion and improvement of the nation's reading resources, said Blanche Collins, Long Beach City Librarian.

As part of the 14th annual observance, Jane Bradley, children's librarian at Burnett Branch Library, has had a poster made from the essay of Mary Helmcamp, seventh-grader who won the National Library Week contest last year. The poster will be used to en-courage children to explore their own feelings about libraries, books and reading.

A broadening of train services is the big reason, of course, but ultramodern motorcoaches are playing no small part in routing vacationists into quaint areas and villages which until now have remained largely undiscovered by foreigners.

A survey by this writer indicates, furthermore, that cruise and ferry services have been stepped up and that motorists are finding improved highways and other conveniences to their liking.

There is one major drawback: visitors will find Europe more crowded than in years past. They must do battle for their pleasures, particularly hotel accom-modations which should be reserved as many weeks in advance as possible.

COST IS the prime consideration for the average American who wishes to see Europe. The trains of 13 countries — Austria, Belgium, Denmark, France, Germany, Holland, Italy, Luxembourg, Norway, Portugal, Spain, Sweden, and Switzerland-offer the eco-

The fastest train in Europe is the Mistral of the French National Railways which, like the wind it is named after, races daily from Paris to Nice, on the French Riviera, Understand ably, it is traditionally a favorite with travelers and its popularity is maintained the consistent quality of its services, food, and versatile facilities.

Canyonlands awe visitor

Scarred, eroded, yet hauntingly beautiful" is the description once given to the classic red red country of Utah, now known as Canyonlands.

Located in the extreme southeast corner of the state, Canyonlands will stirthe adventure in the heart of the traveler. It calls one to explore its timeless, rugged wastes in solitude, or to share adventure with others in the recently created Canyonlands National Park. Or you can join the myriads of water sports fans on the cool waters of Lake Powell, which has 1,800 miles of shoreline.

Visitors trek the new Canyonlands National Park on their own or by jeep tours originating in Moab or Monticello. Nearby is Arches National Monument, one of the largest concentrations of natural stone arches in the world. Many visitors to the different world that is Canyon-lands prefer the guided hoat tour down the winding Colorado River. Then there is Dead Horse Point State Park, overlooking Canyonlands from one of the nation's most spectacular red rock viewpoints, Hovenweep National Monument features ancient ruins of a long dead Indian culture, and Natural Bridges National Monument offers some of the most incredible stone spans in the world.

Speaking of Indians, Monument Valley — the Navajo wonderland — offers the visitor a look at an off-highway world he will likely not soon forget. Life in Monument Valley has remained virtually unchanged for centuries.

I am 58 years old but my friends and relatives tell me I look no more than 45. I hope this is true, because a man who is 35 has asked me to marry him.

I've known Carl for over five years. We are both divorced and have been for several years. I've been very attracted to him for some time and now I find he feels the same way.

Give me some reassurance, Molly, that I am not too old for him, I do have my doubts but I love him and I'm so tired of being alone. Do we have any real chance to be happy? HELP

JACOBY Overcal! in minor suit risky

We like to bid whenever we get a good chance to do so. You do get set but if you never make a doubtful hid you never get anywhere.

Here is a hand from a New York tournament that illustrates why we don't make minor suit overcalls.

South had passed to start. Not that this pass changed the spots on even one card in his hand but it did mean that he could not hold much more than he had. He could not wait to stick in his two club over-

. It is hard to say just how East and West would have bid if South had passed but they would probably have wound up a trifle too high in hearts or no-trump. South's overcall solved all their problems.

WEST HAD a minimum opening bid and was defighted to pass and show this East did not have any convenient bid. Two hearts would be inadequate. Two no-trump or three hearts were a trifle too much, but he did have a nice option. He doubled.

West was delighted to pass. His hand was a min-imum but it did include three quick defensive tricks. He opened the king of diamonds. East signaled with the nine and the defense collected seven tricks right off the bat.

the last six tricks with his frump suit but the 500 penalty was more than East and West would have scored if they had been able to bid and make a game.

To Beautify Your Complexion

For sheer loveliness in complexion beauty there is one simple but important rule to follow. First you must remember that all the time moisture is evaporating from your surface skin and every time you wash you drain off valuable skin oils. The result is a gradual tendency for the skin to develop dry weinkles. This loss of skin oil and moisture is so easy to stop, Ask your druggist for a little oil of Olay and every day and all day see that your complexion is well protected with a film of this tropical oil. If will check further wrinkles and do much to smooth away past damage. Don't forget the same plan to keep your neck and hands lovely as well.

WHEN YOU CALL MAN PACIFIC

HE'LL SHOW YOU HOME IMPROVEMENT IDEAS GALORE...ACTUAL COMPLETED ROOM ADDITIONS AND REMODELINGS IN FULL COLOR!

Your Man from Pacific is a typical family man. . .looks just about average – even puts his shoes on like any other man. But then you can't judge a book by its cover. He believes that the best way to have friends is to BE ONE. He has a knack of knowing how to please. . .how to be a little more helpful. When the man from Pacific comes into your home all his years of building and design experience are at your service; for he is a specialist in home improvement and HOME IMPROVEMENT alone. He likes it that way because quality home improvement is a challenge and it requires a qualified specialist, specifically trained to architecturally blend that new addition of yours into the present structure without that "added-on look."

And your man from Pacific isn't content with yesterdays' laurels. He keeps abreast of the latest concepts in building and design techniques. Every six months he takes part in National Building Seminars and has diplomas from accredited courses.

When the man from Pacific crosses your threshold, he knows he represents a firm prominent in the building field — a One-Stop Home Improvement Center whose years of integrity and building know-how enables them to fully guarantee in writing all labor and materials used in each and every Home Improvement undertaken.

He'll take the time to design that family room, bedroom, kitchen, den or bath right before your eyes — and he'll counsel you on proper construction and on the best financing available — at no cost or obligation to you! So count yourself in on the best thing that ever happened to home improvement — a visit from the man from Pacific — a visit that may well be a special turning point in your family's way of life.

The International Beauty Congress pag-eant (this year's fete gets under way Tuesday) is, all in all, a powerful force for good will in the world, as well as a colorful and entertaining spectacle. But over the years controversies arising out of the Miss Universe and Miss International contests in Long Beach have commanded a big play in the press. There have been under-age contestants, married contestants, phony contestants and contestants with a past. There have been squabbles about contest attire, there have been charges of rigging and there has been name-calling. Mary Neiswender writes about these pageant rhubarbs on page 8. On our cover is the 1966 Miss International, Ingrid (Fiffi) Finger of Germany, who has been free of controversy,

Important to all of Southern California, this San Pedro distribution center supplies much of area seafood

Where Sea Food Comes Ashore

By Seymour Barfield

SAN PEDRO'S municipal wholesale fish market, say visitors, is one of the most interesting places on the Pacific Coast.

Located at Berth 72, on the main channel at the mouth of the old Southern Pacific slip, the market is housed in a two-story Spanish Renaissance building, interesting from either the channel or landside.

In season, mackerel, pilchard (sardines), tuna, harracuda, sea bass and the shell fish, squid and spiny lobster, discharged at the port, are available at the market.

· As visitors watch the spectacle of loading and unloading fish, they breathe deeply of the fresh sea air, they watch gulls as they reel, fight and dive, and they listen to the marine bull horns in the distance.

TRADITIONALLY, the Board of Harbur Commissioners of Los Angeles has made a special effort to provide efficient facilities for the distribution and sale of fresh fish at the port.

Today, Los Angeles harbor is one of the most important fishing centers in the world, comparing favorably with Lewes, Del.; Gloucester, Boston and New Bedford, Mass.; Hull and Grimsby England; Aherdeen, Scotland, and Stavanger, Norway, in the tons of fish which annually pass over the wharves.

Annual reports of the Los Angeles Board of Harbor Commissioners confirm that the market always has been on the San Pedro side of the main channel, in order to accommodate wholesalers of fresh fish.

Scanty information is available up to 1921, but the records show that the facilities were located at Berths 79 and 80.

IN 1921, the bulkhead was in a dangerous condition due to the action of sea worms (marine annellds) and a new fish market and lockers were constructed of timber. Two fish market frame buildings with concrete floors on the first floor and wooden floors on the second floor were -provided.

These facilities became rat infested and antiquated, and were condemned in 1947

The present 67,000 square foot reinforced concrete Municipal Fish Market, built in 1950 at a cost of $900,000, is divided into 12 market stalls, each with large refrigerated cooler walk-in boxes and freezing rooms. Refrigeration is provided by the Union Ice Company's central plant in an adiacent . building.

The second floor provides space to fabricate fish boxes, store supplies, and houses offices and employe kitchens. Ample paved areas are provided at the rear for truck loading and vehicle parking.

CONCRETE catch basins facilitate cleaning the fish trucks at the loading plat-

Fifty-five retail fish peddlers and eight wholesale fish distributors operating vehicles in the area load up in San Pedro.

The market operators are long-time tenants of the port: Los Angeles Fish and Oyster Co. for more than 50 years; State Fish Co., Inc. for more than 30 years; Tomich Brothers Fish Co. for 29 years.

Fish fresh from the sea gets rapid handling to speed it on its way to Southland tables.

OTHER oldtimers include fish primarily from fishing the Ocean Fish Co., American Fishers Inc., Catalina Fish, Standard Fisheries, Star Fisheries Inc., Pioneer, Independent, Del - Mar Fish Co. and Terminal Fisheries.

The wholesalers receive boats for distribution by rail, truck and plane throughout California, but especially for wholesale and retail outlets within Los Angeles County, the Merchant Marine and firms in seven Western states.

Modern facilities are keyed to needs of fish industry. Above, a scene on the landing pier.

What Your Name Means

Send your name to La Reina Rule in care of Southland Magazine, 604 Pine Ave., Long Beach, Calif. 90801, for origin, meaning and brief genealogy, for reply only in this column.

MISS RULE: Would you give a brief genealogy on HARRISON? — C.M., Rossmoor; N.S., Tustin; C.H., Long Beach.

HARRISON was formed from Harry, the nickname for Henry. English kings, beginning with Henry 1 in 1100, gave popularity to the given-name Henry, mean-ing "estate ruler." Harrisons are recorded in England, Scotland and Ireland beginning in the 12th Century. Their armorial shield is blue, decorated with a golden, outspread-winged eagle. This family was fa-mous in American history, for Benjamin Harrison. 1726-1791, signed our Declaration of Independence. His son William Henry Harrison was our ninth president; his greatgrandson Banjamin became our 23rd president.

MISS RULE: Please identify RICHTER. - V.R., Huntington Beach.

RICHTER was an agpropriate name for "judge" surname, which incorporates the progenitor's judicial occupation of righting wrongs, is recorded as early as the 1300s. The Richter armorial shield from Prussia is silver. On it is a tree log placed diagonally.

MISS RULE: Please explain ROSSINI. - M.C., Long Beach.

ROSSINI of Italy had for ne ancestor a "young, the ancestor a "young, red-haired man," for this is the name's significance. The Rossini armorial shield from Milano, Italy, is silver, engraved with three red roses growing from green stems. Notable ancestors include Gioacchino Rossini, 1792-1868, composer of the famous opera "Barber of Seville."

MISS RULE: Would like data on DAHL. - C.B., L.D., Long Beach.

DAHL of Sweden, Norway and Germany, gives the farm location of the family ancestor. "Dahl" meant "from the valley." One of several Dahl family armorial shields is silver, decorated with two green trees growing out of a pair

MISS RULE: Kindly inform us on HILLIARD, HILYARD. — N.11. Her-mosa Beach; L.H., Long Beach; J.H., Wilmington.
HILLIARD as a surname began in England with the land description "Hyll-Geard," deciphered as "Hill-stronghold." This place, fortified for use in battle, was the family home. Yorkshire ancestors include Robert Hillard, 1273. The Hilliard-Hilyard armorial shield is blue, decorated with three golden stars.

MISS RULE: May We have the background on BROOKE, BROOKS? -I.H., J.B., R.N., Long Beach.

BROOKE symbolizes an English ancestor who lived on the bank of a flowerfringed stream. BROOKS described a man who lived at the confluence of two "brooks." Ancestors in-clude Alice de la Broke (Brooke) in 1273. The Brooks shield from Lancashire is red, decorated with a red lion on a silver stripe, The Brooke shield is gold, centered with scalloped-edge cross colored red on its left half, black on its right half. New England Massachusetts ancestors include Goodman Brookes of Concord in 1647 and William Brooke of Scituate, 1649. (Copyright, 1967, I a Reina Ru'e)

Girl mimics monkey.

Fun at Dairy Farm Zoo

Pete Hettinga tosses food to swan as wife watches.

By Barbara Knesis

NO SIGNS POINT the way but a little thing like that does not deter the tiny explorers.

The children find Pete's Farm.

Maybe they happen up Orangewood Road in Cypress by accident some afternoon on their bikes and see a herd of white deer peering through an enclosed pen at them. Or maybe one of their chums comes to school some Monday morning bragging about the really swell place he found over the weekend. Then again maybe it was their mother who heard about it from a neighbor.

Anyway, the children find Pete's Farm where they can feed and mingle with animals, many of which roam the grounds unattended. Peacocks stroll among the deer, strut along Orangewood Road and mix with many of the other birds left free. At nights they roost in the trees.

"THE ANIMALS know this is their home and they stay here," owner Pete Hettinga tells the inquiring children.

"They may roam off a mile or two during the day but at nights they fly home."

Most of the pint-size spectators would not think of a visit to Pete's Farm without stopping and chatting awhile with Charlie the monkey. Charlie used to have his liberty, too, but then he started snatching fruit from the trees and eggs from the nests of birds. So into a cage he went, with two roommates—a pair of squirrel monkeys. He is still bitter about

More often than not, the children come to the farm clutching a loaf of bread. Before they can open the bags, the deer that minutes before Were nibbling on hay in the center of their pen are at the edge of the fence, jaws open and mouths watering.

A lone black duck honks. He is hungry, too. One of the children breaks off a chunk of bread and timidly holds it out toward him. The duck snaps it out of her hand and the child smiles, pleased.

FROM SUNRISE to sundown, on some days, carloads of people are likely to line the narrow, pitted road that passes in front of Pete's Farm, as its little visitors have named the place. To them it is a zoo, offering even more fun than many big zoos.

Few are content to view the black swan and plnk flamingos from a distance. They either pile out of their cars and move to the fence, where they lure the creatures as close as they can with sweet talk and food, or they walk to the rear of the place where the horses, sheep, cows and monkeys stay.

Sometimes a whole troop of Girl

Sometimes a whole troop of Girl Scouts or Roy Scouts or a classroom of students can be seen stomping the green velvet lawns which abound with brilliantly colored peacocks and other exotic birds as well as farmyard regulars like turkeys, chickens and roosters.

But mostly it's the area children who frequent the 90-acre farm which is as sweet-smelling as a freshly talcumed baby. These are the children who nicknamed the place Pete's Farm and who call its owner Pete.

"Yeah," Hettinga tells a coffeedrinking guest, "they call me Pete, not Mr. Heltinga." His eyes gleam, belying his 63 years, and he adds: "Just like I'm a playmate."

His wife, a soft-spoken woman, laughs lightly.

"The children," she says, "knack on the door and ask me if Pete can come out. They just love him. He loves them, too."

MRS, HETTINGA says when a new boy or girl asks her husband if he is Pete and he nods "their eyes light up as if to say 'Oh boy, I met Pete.'"

"The children are proud to be my friend because I call them by name and make a big fuss over them when they come to visit," Hettinga says.

Neighborhood mothers hold Hettinga in as high esteem as their offspring.

"He's been so good for our kids," one woman says. "He comes out and talks to them and generates such a warm feeling. He just loves them and goes out of his way for them."

Hettinga, who can watch the cars pull to the side of the road from his kitchen window, jumps up and points to the first car of the morning.

"Always the people come. Some as early as 7:30 a.m. They come and stand in the road and look," he says, returning to his seat, smiling. He sits straight, almost stiff, and sips on his coffee, remembering how it all began 12 years and two monkeys ago.

"A MAN OFFERED me two monkeys. They were healthy looking, not ugly, so I took them."

Over the years he added horses, deer,

"Look at all those cows!"

swans, flamingos, pheasants, quail, sheep, peacocks, ducks, rabbits, doves, canaries, parakeets — "a little bit of everything," he says.

"Only my cows are for profit," he points out. There are 750 of them and they make a picturesque scene as they graze.

Hettinga is tremendously proud of his animals.

"If you are not proud of anything, you do not have anything," he tells a group of women accompanying their children. That is why he can be seen bright and early every morning washing down the sidewalk of his home. The animals receive the same treatment, for as he puts it "a clean animal is a healthy animal."

Natives of Holland, the Hetlingas still relain a whisper of an accent and old world customs. Their kitchen is always set with extra cups for the friends who stop by daily for coffee, homemade Dutch cakes and conversation.

HETTINGA'S LOVE of animals goes back to his days in Holland.

"He used to play with little sticks and pretend they were cows," his wife says.

When he was too old to pretend any more, he bought the real thing and went into the dairy business in 1925 with 25

"Baby calves are born here every day," Hettinga says. His eyes smile first and then his mouth follows.

"Many times when there is a difficult hirth, the children in the neighborhood help me."

That's Pete's Farm — a place where animals and children come together and each learns a little about the other.

Rhubarbs in Long Beach Pageant? Why, We've Had Some Beauties

By Mary Neiswender

The pageant switched titles and went from swimsuits to playsuits in 1960. Many girls complained, "They make me look too hippy."

WERY FEW today can remember the name of the first beauty pageant winner from Long Beach's initial "spectacular."

In fact, only a few could recall the name of the last Miss International Beauty.

But very few who have followed the parade of beauties in the International City over the past 15 years will have furgotten such contestants as:

Leona Gage — the Miss U.S.A. who was a Mrs. and a mother a couple times over.

Or the stripteaser from L.A.'s Burlesque Row who opened the 1964 pageant by removing all obstacles to the judging of curves on the red carpet leading to the Lafayette Hotel.

Or the 15-year-old Long Beach coed who posed as Miss Costa Rica and ended up a guest of the country she had never seen.

The list is almost endless and it all adds up to a show which at one time carried more newspaper linage than any other event in the world.

THE STORY THAT started the show on the road in 1952 was not so much that Miss Finland, Armi Kuusela, was chosen as the first Miss Universe, but that an also-ran, Miss Italy, brunette Giovanna Mazzotti, ran home and shouted from all seven hills of Rome:

"It was rigged. She doesn't have legs -- she doesn't have a bust -- she has nothing."

She was chosen, cried the 18-year-old Roman, as a publicity stunt to publicize the Olympic Games being held in Helsiabi

Only one judge countered: "I didn't realize...the Olympic Games were to be In Finland — until I read about it in the papers later."

But that wasn't the first pageant's only problem,

Two of the foreign beauties - Miss

Australia and Miss Hong Kong — refused to go home, creating two international incidents.

Hong Kong refused to send another entrant to the next Long Beach show because the government there became "mortified" when the eastern beauty was quoted by the worldwide press as saying she "loved America" and preferred "not to return to my homeland."

MISS AUSTRALIA got "so very much engrossed in America and American manhood" that pageant officials finally had to ask immigration officials to get her out of the country before her visa expired — but not before the sponsor was forced — by national pressure — to drop his sponsorship.

Meanwhile, b a c k in Turkey, charges were made that the show — which showed off Turkish charms for the first time in public—"degraded Turkish women." The newspaper-sponsor Batan promptly dropped its sponsorship because of the nationwide furor — but a second newspaper, Islanbul's Cumburiyet, with four times the circulation and apparently four times as a ware of the value of the publicity, picked up the ball.

Then, of course, a $3 million plagiaris m suit, filed by a Sunset Strip booking agent against the pageant on the grounds that the show was his idea, didn't hurt in the long strip of clippings the pageant was accumulating.

The contest publicity continued throughout the world and throughout the year — some 10 million lines of it — leading Oscar Meinhardt, the then pageant director, to comment the following year: "A year ago we were fighting for publicity. No with news outlets are calling us."

BUT IT WASN'T THE oft-times staid parade of beauties that won the fame for the city and the pageant.

It was the other things.

For example:

When French beauty Christiane Martel was crowned the most beautiful girl in the world papers throughout the globe carried her picture. But when she applied for a marriage license and gave her age as 17—there was more publicity. The minimum age for contestants was 18, Exotic dancer Diane Lewis, 22, turned up with contestants and stripped in midst of ceremonies at the Lafayette Hotel in 1964.

Tokyo newspaper raised question about the bust of Akiko Kojima of Japan, the winner in 1959.

and papers the world over carried the "scandal."

When five U.S. congressmen petitioned the State Department to grant a visa to a curvaceous Greek maiden entered in the pageant, "lest she become a pawn in the cold war," the press was overjoyed—and showed it on the front pages.

The 21-year-old Greek entry, Rika Dianlina, had drawn an illustration for a book written by a Communist author and the American embassy in Athens said she couldn't be granted a visa.

The story continued on the front pages of papers across the world until, finally, then Secretary of State John Foster Dulles interceded and asked the U.S. attorney general to grant a temporary entry permit.

A second international story crupted on the other side of the world when Korea had to name a replacement for its contest winner because Korean authorities had charged Puh Linkhni's "environment in the community-run North was questionable."

BETWEEN PAGEANTS there were demands for investigation from city councilmen, fights between directors and sponsors, slaps from church groups and even sniping from behind the Iron Curtain

Charged the influential East German Communist Party newspaper Neus Deutschland:

"Young girls, with good figures, who already have tasted the cup of sorrow because of social misery, will have to appear half nude before a jury. Shamelessly, they will be examined and judged like horses... by blase men of the world."

A group of Ursuline nuns in Milan sued an Italian magazine which printed a pin-up picture of the Long Beach runner-up, 18-year-old Bruna Becchio. The pictures, said the good sisters, brought a flood of protest letters... and caused parents to threaten to withdraw their daughters from their school. Seems the curvaceous Italian had been one of their students.

Beauty Fete Plays an Important Role in the Fostering of International Good Will ... But There Have Been a Few 'Incidents'

Reona Herz was 15-year-old coed at Millikan when she posed as Miss Costa Rica in 1961 fete.

Before pageant officials put a ban on marriage, there were stories like: "Miss New York State...would be

"Miss New York State... Would be late for the contest. The redhalred beauty complained to police that her husband hit her... and threatened her with a knife." Her husband languished in jail while Miss New York came on to the contest.

IN 1956 Miss Is rael refused to pose with Miss Germany because the Jewish contestant said it would "humiliate her mother." The mother's family had been destroyed when Germany invaded Poland in 1939.

That was the same year the Latin American delegates decided to go home mad after the entire Latin contingent was eliminated in final judging.

"Miss Germany is to p heavy... Miss Sweden could not speak in public... and the beauty of some of the others — well you can Judge for yourself," Miss Chile complained as she headed for home.

In 1959 controversies broke out in four countries as to whether their girls should bare ther charms in bathing suits in Long Beach.

Sponsors in Ireland, Spain, the Philippines and Portugal came under heavy pressure from church and state.

In the Philippines, a college coed already had won the national crown but was forced to withdraw from the International Competition because of the pressure. Sponsors in the other three nations who had made preliminary deals to send their national winners to the International City, balked.

Reason: The girls had to appear In bathing suits.

THE INDONESIAN English Times blasted the selection of an Indonesian girl for the competition:

"How can we glibly talk about sending an Indonesian girl to be stared at and measured in tight-fitting trunks before thous ands of onlookers?... The very idea of a beauty be Ing manhandled and ogled at should be taboo tous."

Miss United Arab Republic, Alda K adamani, an 18-year-old blonde f r o m Dam a s c u s, gave up her title for the same reason: s h o wouldn't appear "before all those men judges" in a bathing suit.

Then the "battle of the bathing suits" hit the United States.

New Mexico's Archbishop Edwin V. Byrne prohibited any Catholic girl in New Mexico from appearing publicly in a beauty contest under threat of excommunication of herself and her family.

"Apparently the archbishop doesn't understand the purpose of the contest — which is to promote international good will and friendship," countered Director Meinhardt.

The archbishop didn't understand.
And 20-year-old Sue Ingersoll of Albuquerque, a Catholic, withdrew.

IT WAS THEN the bathing suit situation — which had been straining at the seams — tore apart.

Catalina Swimsuits—owners of the title Miss Universe and obvious suppliers of the costumes in which the girls were judged—decided to pack their suits and travel to friendlier climes. With their swimsuits they took the title Miss Universe, I caving the city with beauty pageant talent but no pageant.

Meinhardt, the showman, countered again,

"We'll have 'Miss International Beauty' and her public exposure will be limited to tastefully designed playclothes."

Worldwide Interest, although confused, continued to focus on Long Beach

Katinka Bieeker of Holland caused uproar when it was learned she had been a topiess Vegas showgirl.

French beauty Christiane Martel, after winning 1954 crown, gave her age as 17. Minimum was 18.

Sue Ingersoll quit in 1959 after archbishop barred New Mexico's Catholic girls from beauty fetes.

HOW TO SUCCEED IN SHOW BUSINESS

By Harvey Waggoner

YOU SAY WE'VE messed up the title of a very successful musical comedy by Frank Loesser? You say there isn't a formula for success in a theatrical venture? Wrong — twice!

The Long Beach Civic Light Opera Association illustrates the truth of the heading with its 50th production in 18 years, when starting May 4 it presents (coincidence?) "How to Succeed in Business Without Really Trying."

This event will furnish the latest in a distinguished succession of tuneful hits for this home-grown organization that has been called by a leading New York theatrical authority "probably the best community musical comedy production in America."

The way this all came about makes an interesting £lory.

The idea was born in a basement room of a downtown music store, and was the inspiration of Henri C. Scanlon. Scanlon, a Long Beach native and a professional singer, had just returned from a nationwide trip as a principal ("show business" for leading performer) in a Gilbert and Sullivan touring company. He believed that there was a need both for cultural enrichment in the community and an opportunity for the many talented amateurs residing in

HE WANGLED SOME FREE publicity from a Long Beach newspaper writer, arranged for the basement room (at no charge) and announced a meeting, inviting all those who would be interested in "putting on some shows." To this meeting came some 25 people of varying talent and enthusiasm. Of these charter members-the organization was launched that night-several still maintain a connection. They are Patricia Zieg, Rose Bishop, Arthur Carah, Harold Woodhouse and Harvey Waggoner.

The decision was made to present as their first effort a production which would be both appealing and inexpensive. The choice was Gilbert and Sullivan's "H.M.S. Pinafore." Scanlon - still finagling - received permission to rehearse and produce this and several subsequent shows at the old Long Beach Elks Lodge at 19 Cedar Ave. Cast members chipped in to cover production costs of $30 (productions now cost from $30,000 to $40,000). Producer Scanlon became general director Scanlon as well. The group chose as its title The Singers' Workshop of Long Beach, (In 1962 the present title was adopted.)

Encouraged by the mild success of the first venture — a production profit of $100 — the group began planning its second "extravaganza," budgeted at (you guessed it) $100.

This one, "Pirates of Penzance," was followed the next year by a double-header, "Trial by Jury" and "The Mikado," all by Gilbert and Sullivan.

IN 1951 A MILESTONE was reached. With great bravery the group decided to depart from the safe, comfortable Gilbert and Sullivan repertoire and offer a more modern menu; another twin bill, "Down in the Valley" and "Roberta." At this time the group bade farewell to the Elks Lodge and moved "uptown" to Morgan Hall.

From Morgan Hall the singers progressed quickly to the Municipal Auditorium Concert Hall, with "The Desert Song" and "Music in the Air."

In 1959 they increased their productions to three a year, and in 1962 to four. Among the most outstanding productions have been "The Merry Widow," "Finian's Rainbow," "Kiss Me Kate," 'The Student Prince," 'The King and J," "Kismet," "Call Me Madam," "Guys and Dolls," "Flower Drum Song," "The Unsinkable Molly Brown," "The Sound of Music," "Gypsy," "My Fair Lady," "Camelot," "The Music Man" and "West Side Story."

In 1957, the need to take gainful employment made it necessary for Scanion to resign his post as general director and man of all functions. The author of this article, the present general manager, agreed to assume some of Scanlon's production responsibilities, together with helping develop a contributions program which would offset mounting production costs. Since there were no funds available. I worked for nearly a year at no salary - plenty of prestige, but no salaryl

The County of Los Angeles responded similarly, and at the recommendation of the County Music Commission began in 1963 the first of a series of guarantees against loss. The commission recently voted to change the guaran. tee to an outright grant.

Critical notices of shows have been uniformly favorable. Daniel Cariaga, of the Independent, Press-Telegram, said of our production of "The Music Man": "It was a recreation of which both Meredith Willson and CLO can be proud." Mr. Willson, who was present, was indeed proud and said: "Through the years I have seen literally hundreds of The Music Man' productions, and yours ranks with the very finest,"

Ray Duncan of KNBC News reviewed this same production, as well as the recent "West Side Story," and commented on Southern California television that they were "superior to many so-called professional productions,"

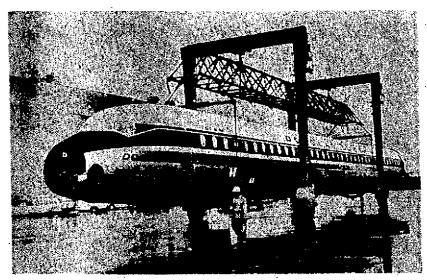

That these productions are professional in their final result cannot be denied. That the participants are amateur means only that they do not receive salaries. Webster defines an amateur as "one who cultivates an art from love or attachment, and without reference to gain or emolu-

How Do You Pick Up a Giant Jet?

By Herb Shannon

shine, a massive machine rambles to life inside the big bird farm on Lakewood Boulevard at Long Beach Airport, and another giant Douglas jetliner makes its first flight-without benefit of wings.

For all its streamlined grace and proud painted plumage, an airliner fuselage is as clumsy and helpless as any fledgling of the forest before it gets the use of its wings. A major problem of hatching one of these huge man-made birds is simply the means of moving the bulky body from one assembly building to another.

Until recently, the solution at sprawling Douglas Aircraft Division was to build the fuselage on welded dollies so it could be towed on rails like an overgrown trolley car. But that was before the Long Beach engineers began stretching their blueprints and came up with the 251-passenger Super Sixty DC-8, the world's largest airliner now flying.

PRODUCTION experts started scrambling for a substitute for their shorthaul railroad as soon as they got a look at plans for the 187-foot fuselage, nearly 40 feet longer than anything they had handled before.

They found the answer. along the waterfront, tool designers suspended where shipbuilders were an 89-foot steel truss from EVERY SO often, rain or using a gawky conveyance on stilts to trundle seagoing hulls weighing up to 50 tons around the yards. Dubbed the Travelift, it was a much-magnified version of the leggy lumber carrier which strides over a stack of studs and siding at the mill, picks it up in slings and delivers the load to the construction site.

Designers at the Drott Manufacturing Co. of Wausau, Wis., over-exercised the admonition to think big when they borrowed the idea for the Travelift, Instead of six-foot legs and the 12-foot wheelbase of the lumber carrier, the selfpropelled shipyard giant stands 35 feet high and 50 feet long. It rolls on tires four feet in diameter and straddles boats of 20-foot beam without grazing the wheels on either side.

THE DROTT designers transplanted the driver's cab from the top of the rig to a spot just forward of the left rear wheel, so the operator can see the full length of the chassis. They also gave the vehicle enough diesel power for half a dozen lumber carriers and transmitted the energy hydraulically to all four wheels and the dual hoist mechanism.

Converting the Travelift from shipyard to aircraft work called for another major alteration. Douglas the hoists to increase the distance between the lifting slings for better balance of the long load. Then they put a couple of cradles under the fuselage for proper distribution of the weight.

The day the first Super Sixty fuselage was finished, the Travelift driver cautiously threaded his machine over the elongated aluminum egg. Under the gaze of several hundred pairs of uneasy eyes, the slings lowered on either side and then rose again, straining against 26 tons of steel tooling and aluminum air-frame. Off the ground at last, the wingless jetliner rolled smoothly away to the paint shop across the ramp.

BUT THE toughest test was yet to come. After the spraygun artists finished their work, the fuselage was ready to join its wings at the head of the final assembly line, nearly half a mile distant. Again the mammoth mobile crane gently lifted its cargo and completed the journey without a hitch.

Soon dozens of the stretched-out DC-8s will soar aloft to inaugurate airline service in and between both hemispheres. But every one of the new and larger jets will make its maiden flight in the clutches of a thirdgeneration lumber carrier.

Appropriately, both are the biggest of their breeds.

With daughter Anne of tricycle age, the Bakers comented this space completely and highlighted the wall with iron planters and geraniums in the kitchen colors.

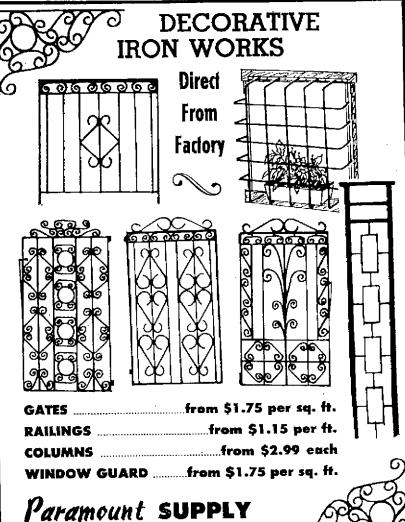

Baker made kitchen display shelves from shutters painted white to match the walls.

The garage opens directly from the kitchen, so Baker decided to transform it into a workshop lined with storage shelves. To soften the unsightly approach, he added a peg board to the exposed wall and covered it with a collection of copper utensils.

AT THE END of a long hall leading to the bedrooms hang several framed candid photographs of Anne, all captioned delightfully.

It's Lamb, Mam!

By Mildred K. Flanary

Sculhland Magazine Home Economics Edilor

T'S SPRING, and the subject is "Lamb," Mam! And what could be more synonymous with spring and with lamb --- than fresh vegetables that have been "buttered up" with luscious butter sauces, herbs, spices and lemon juice. They truly add a royal touch.

As for the lamb, try this simple, yet spectacular way to serve it. All you do is fill the center with mint-flavored stuffing and pop it. in the oven. Be sure to order your crown roast from your butcher well in advance of the date you wish to serve it. He'll make it up from two racks of lamb which are rib roasts. With two racks you would have 14-16 chops,

CROWN ROAST OF LAMB WITH MINT STUFFING

Shallow roasting pan with rack. Preheated 300 degree oven.

- 8 slices white bread, toasted and cubed
- I unpeeled red apple, diced
- 11/2 tablespoons coarsely chopped mint
- · I teaspoon poultry seasoning
- tables enhanced with seasoned butter sauces, Surround butter, lemon juice and chopped pecans,

6 tablespoons (¾ stick) butter

- 1/2 cup chopped cefery
- 1/4 cup chopped onion cup water
- 5-6 pound crown roast of lamb

In a large bowl combine bread, apple, mint and poultry seasoning. In a small saucepan melt butter, add celery and onion and saute 5 minutes. Add to bread mixture along with water; toss lightly. Fill center of roast with stuffing; place on rack in pan. Roast about 21/2 hours or until meat thermomeler registers 175-180 degree (depending on desired degree of doneness). Make gravy, if desired.

- 2 cups water
- 1/4 cup regular all-purpose flour Drippings
 - Salt and pepper.

Gradually add ½ cup of the water to flour to make a smooth paste; add remaining water to drippings. Gradually add flour mixture to drippings. Cook over medium heat, stig-ring constantly, until thickened. Cook 2 additional minutes Season to taste with salt and pepper.

THE ART OF THE ODYSSEY. By Howard W. Clarke. Prentice-Hall Spectrum Books, $3.95; paperback, $1.45.

Howard Clarke, of Oakland University's department of classics, convincingly shows that the Odyssey, with its universal themes and masterful style, is for everyone. In Clarke's retelling of the story, he enables the new reader of the great epic to better understand its significance. The Odyssey's main themes -- justice and love -- have become basic to our literary culture, he says.

THE CORRESPOND-ENCE OF JAMES BOS-WELL AND JOHN JOHNS-TON OF GRANGE, edited by Ralph S. Walker. Mc-Graw-Hill, $17.50.

THESE ARE the letters between two men who found their friendship almost indispensable to each other. They show Boswell completely unaffected and without reserve. Their correspondence began when Boswell was a student not quite 19, and Johnston an apprentice in law. Johnston was the laird of a small estate in Scotland left him by his father. He was Hoswell's elder by 10 years. The letters begin in 1759 and end in 1786, when Johnston died and Boswell abandoned the bar in Scotland for that of England.

We share young Boswell's thrill when he comes to London for the first time (in 1762, when he was 21). "At last I am got to this great Metropolis the object of my wishes for so long; The Place where I consider Felicity to dwell and age to he a stranger to. I am all in a flutter of joy. Clean electric heat gives you more time off from housework.

Less housework leaves you more time for self-improvement (like taking judo lessons) or for family activities. Electric heat is as clean as the sun, keeps the whole house clean longer.

Electric heat is just one of the great things about an all-electric Gold Medallion home.

Gold Medallion homes also feature: a flameless electric kitchen complete with range, oven, other major appliances; flameless electric water heating—space saving, quick-recovery, lasts up to 10 years longer; full "housepower" wiring including 240-volt service essential for modern living; abundant lighting for comfort, convenience and beauty.

Sound expensive? Wrong. All-electric Gold Medallion homes come in all price ranges, and operating costs are surprisingly low.

COIN ROUNDUP

U.S. Bars Few Foreign Coins

By Maurice M. Gould

THE Treasury Department reports there are no restrictions upon the importation of coins in any metal other than gold, except:

The acquisition or importation of any coins of any metal issued by Mainland China or North Korea, or any coins held in either of these areas on or after Dec. 7, 1950, are prohibited under the Foreign Assets Control Regulations.

The acquisition or importation of any coins of any metal issued by North Vietnam, or any coins held in North Vietnam on or after May 5, 1964, are prohibited.

The importation of coins issued by Cuba at any time, or any coins held in Cuba on or before Feb. 7, 1962, are prohibited under the Cuban Assets Control Regulations.

These regulations are administered by the Office of Foreign Assets Control in the Treasury Department.

Quite a bit of Cuban gold and other coinage trickled into Florida with the waves of refugees from Castro's dictatorship.

Cuban gold and silver coinage was recalled, so many of the coins may become scarce in the future. Occasionally some of the recent dates are found, probably finding their way to the United States from Canada or some other neutral country.

A Cuban Crown was struck by one of the groups in exile. It is a beautiful piece and follows the pattern of the 1896 and 1898 Revolutionary pieces struck previously.

There is an unusual coin group in Puerto Rico—the Cuban Collectors in Exile—which is still active. The members are waiting for the opportunity to someday return to their homeland when Cuba will be free again.

WHEN EDWARD VIII, now the Duke of Windsor, was ready to ascend the throne, coins were prepared for various British Colonies, none with his portrait and all dated 1936. In all, 11 different issues were produced: New Guinea, bronze penny; Fast Africa, bronze 5-cent, and 10-cent; West Africa, penny, half-penny and 1-10 penny made of nickel; Fiji, a nickel penny and one in copper; and Kutch, one of the Indian native states, three interesting silver issues. (There coins have native inscriptions with no English legends appearing on them.)

Some of the African coins were struck by the Kings Norton Copper Co., whose mintmark is KN. Some were struck by Heaton's, Birmingham, England, with the mintmark H. Some were struck by the Royal Mint in London which has no mintmark.

With the varieties, the complete set would total 20 pieces.

A number of pieces were struck in gold unofficially, and while these pieces are of interest to collectors, they do not have the legitimate standing of the regular coinage. These have the Edward VIII portrait.

There is an interesting $2 Canadian bill which shows Edward as a young man on one of his visits to Canada. This is a large size and is now a collector's item.

MANY INQUIRIES have been received regarding the meaning of the word FIDO which appears regularly in coin and numismatic publications.

This word was composed by error collectors, and the letters stand for Freaks, Imperfections, Defects, Oddities.

This field today has thousands of adherents. With the hundreds of millions of coins being struck, minor errors and imperfections of all sorts come about, and collectors can still obtain many pieces at no expense other than face value. Collectors have told me that every day brings the possibility of new finds, and this, of course, is exciting to any numismatist.

Risk of dying for the middle-aged Scranton resident is about twice as great, the study shows.

Low-rate areas for death in middleage are in the Great Plains and the Mid-South. Highest rates are in metropolitan areas, chiefly near the East Coast.

MEN GET ANGRY more often than women, according to a report in the Journal of the American Medical Association.

Anger studies conducted at Columbla University and Oregon State College show that the average man

Men's tempers, research shows, are more likely to flare at an inanimate object --- flat tire, missed train. Women get angry more often at other persons. Flareups come because of real or fancied slights or assorted personal grievances.

MILK INTOLERANCE is relatively higher among Negroes than whites.

The finding stems from a study conducted by two physicians at the Johns Hopkins University School of Medicine, Baltimore.
In some adults, about 70 per cent of whom are Negro, milk causes abdominal bloating, cramps and diarrhea.

Victims often have a deficiency of intestinal lactase activity and therefore are unable to digest the milk sugar, lactose. Lactase is a digestive enzyme.

The cause of this deficiency and Its incidence aren't known.

ager and one or more independent advisers. Anyone may audition, except members of one of the performing unions. Civic Light Opera cooperates closely with the Actors' Equity requirement that union performers not participate.

The affairs of the nonprofit corporation are conducted by me, under the authority of a Board of Directors consisting of 30 people, President Robert P Graham, long a devoted worker in civic affairs, says, "This is a worthwhile project. We are fortunate to have in our community such fine cultural projects as our Museum, our Long Beach Symphony, and our Civic Light Opera, The Board of Directors is working very hard to promote the growth of CLO, knowing that it is a unique asset, and should be supported."

One of the many concerns of Graham and the board is the procurement of outside funds. A comprehensive program has been designed under the general chairmanship of businessman John McCune. Assisting him are Howard Conrad and Walter Groshong in the field of major gifts. Conrad is concentrating on the personal gifts of individuals in the Active Life Members ($1,000 pledges), and the C-Noters ($100) categories. Groshong is contacting local business and corporate entitles for consideration in their upcoming budgets.

The Women's Guild, formed several years ago by Mrs George P. Taubman Jr., has recently been reorganized under the leadership of Mrs. Donald C. Malcolm, Guild president. The Guild's recent highly successful musicals-type variety show, presented with Buffums', netted over $1,000 to the CLO treasury and will be presented annually. Future activity of the Guild will include assisting in the sale of tickets and solicitation of contributions.

WHAT, THEN, IS THE secret of "How to Succeed in (Show) Business Without (By) Really Trying?" How has this organization endured in a venture fraught with peril, and littered by bones of less-favored entrepreneurs?

The answer is people. People who care. The hundreds of performers and backstage workers who give freely of their talent and devotion (each production represents over 50,000 man-hours of contributed time); the people who buy the tickets and make personal contributions, large or small; the people in City and County government; the people who direct the multimillion-dollar destines of great corporations; the people who work on the Board of Directors (and in most cases several other boards of directors).

It is particularly timely that the upcoming production has as its theme the concept of success. It is delightful entertainment and it provides an opportunity for you to attend and partake of this marvelous community activity.

Happy Birds Repay Shelter Builders

By Steve Ellingson

TO MILLIONS of Americans, the season's first robin means that the grip of winter is broken and spring has, at last, arrived. In increasingly large areas of our country, however, spring now comes unheralded by the return of the birds. In fact, the nesting birds in general have declined as much as 90 per cent in many areas. This mass murder has been brought about by the indis-criminate use of chemical in secticides sprayed throughout our land.

There was a time when birds labored from dawn to dusk to rid our farms and gardens of flies, weevils, mosquitoes and hundreds of other insects. Their work was carried on with a chorus of sone and a flash of color. It appears that birds are losing their place in our modern chemically drenched world. The question now is, how long can man go on destroying birds and other wild life without upsetting nature's balance of power and eventually destroying himself in the pro-

One of the ways to protect and encourage birds to live near us is to provide feeding shelters and houses. By so doing, we not only help them, but bird watching can be a great deal of fun. And when you stop to think that each bird eats its own weight in insects every day, they repay our kindness to them in full measure.

SIX BIRD facilities are shown here with Cami Sebring of Walt Disney's movie "The Gnomemovie "The Gnome-Mobile." There are four different houses and two feeding shelters. Each is easy to build when you use the full size pattern. You merely trace the patterns on wood, then saw them out and put them together. A project any boy (or girl) from 8 to 80 can undertake with success.

To obtain the full size pattern assortment number C-12 for building all six of the facilities shown, plus three more not in the picture, send $2 in currency, check or money order to Steve Ellingson, Independent, Press-Telegram Pattern Dept., Box 2383, Van Nuys,

Probing Sea's Mysteries

By Jack Baldwin

UNIOUE deepdiving untethered underwater camera that sinks more than two miles down to the ocean floor then pops back to the surface after photographing rare bottom-dwelling creatures is offering new clues to sclentists attempting to solve the mysteries of the dark undersea world.

The free-falling camera system is completely selfcontained and automatic. There is no conventional cable connection to the mother ship.

The system consists of a weight attached to one end of a 65-foot line, Rigged to the line 12 feet above the hallast weight is the camera with its high intensity strobe light,

Above the camera is the main float, Syntatic foam, which serves a dual purpose. It maintains the string of equipment perpendicular to the ocean floor and causes the entire system to bob back up to the surface after the photographic mission has been completed.

Secured further up the string is a buoy containing a radio transmitter and a radar reflector that aids in recovering the device once it has returned to the sur-

THE WEIGHTED ballast resting on the bottom also contains balt which attracts the bottom creature's within camera range.

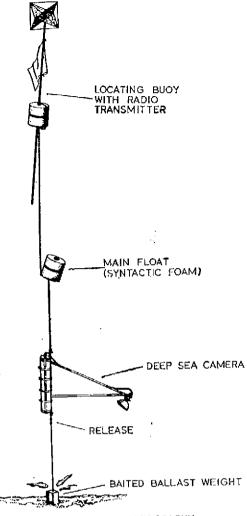

The shutter of the camera remains open continuously. Every 15 minutes a timing device triggers the flash lamp. The same signal causes the film to advance one frame.

The camera photographs an area of 9 by 12 feet about the size of the average living room rug.

There is a magnesium link in the string between the camera and the ballast weight. The link acts as a timer. The metal is attacked by electrolysis, an electrical-chemical reaction with sea water. When much of the link has been eaten away, it snaps, allowing the float to carry the camera and radio transmitter to the surface.

The system was developed under a National Science Foundation grant to scientists and technicians at the University of California at San Diego's Scripps Institution of Oceanografalling camera system under the direction of John D. Isaacs, professor of oceanography and director of the marine life research group. It has been under development since 1958.

TWO ENGINEERS in the Ocean Technology Section of Scripps Marine Life Research Group, George Schick and Meridith Sessions, developed the free-

Schick reported the system performed "admirably" during its first deep-ocean tests off Cape Colnnett, Baja California.

"We completed three 30to 60-hour missions. They were at depths of 4,560 feet, 6,788 feet and 11,262 feet," Schick reported.

From 100 to 240 clear. distinct photographs were taken at 15-minute intervals during each mission. On one of the missions the scientists used color film.

It was during one of these dives that the camera photographed USO (Unidentified Swimming Object) or so-called "sea mon-ster," Prof. Isaacs and other marine biologists at the institution subsequently identifled it as a 22-foot Sleeper, or Greenland shark, found usually in the colder Arctic waters. Temperature of the water where the shark was photographed was only three degrees above freezing.

Camera snaps rattail grenadiers around bait can and male skate (left) in 6,000 feet of water.

The discovery of huge shark in the Mexican waters prompted a "sea monster" hunt. Aboard the "Occaneer," Long Beachbased ocean research vessel, Isaacs, accompanied by Edward Horton, West Coast manager for Ocean Science Engineering, fished for the big shark using 60-pound hunks of horse meat for bait.

MORE CONTRACTE AND CONTRACTION OF A SAME OF A SAME OF

They reported that "something" kept taking kept taking their bait at a depth of 6,000 feet. The scientists have said they will try again to catch the bottom-dwelling monster.

Dr. Warren Wooster, professor of oceanography who conducted the initial deep-water tests of the new camera system, told of the system's value to scientific studies:

"This free vehicle camera system departs from previous deep-sea photographic systems in two important aspects. Deploy-ment of the camera as a free instrument overcomes the many limitations of previous ship-connected camera systems. Long timesequence photography of one area of the sea floor is made feasible and should provide an essential tool for the study of environment on marine organisms,

the Rainmaker, Long ago Hatfield had planned on developing his own method of gathering gold. He built a dam across a canyon with the idea that when he created rain, the water would wash the gold down against the dam and he would be rich, Rain he made; so much of it that the dam and the gold washed away.

Not far off the road stands a weathered machine for separating gold from gravel and dirt. It was some miner's dream of riches, built of wood from apple boxes, old tires, flattened oil cans and hand-forged bolts. Tucked down in a corner of the "Rube Goldberg" creation was a Road Runner's pad, but no bird was home.

up the engine to get more power. The heavy coal smoke is supposed to have caused the fatalities. Only six persons survived. The engineer was found dead at the throttle.

Q. How can I tell if a winged, ant-like insect is an ant or a termite? K.R.

A. Ants are constricted ("pinched in") at the waistline; termites have no constriction in the waistline. The rear wings of an ant (when it has wings) are considerably smaller than the front wings, and are often attached to them; there is little difference in size between the rear and front wings of a termite.

Q. Why did the Indians use clam shell wampum for money when these shells were so plentiful? E.V.

A. Ciam shells were relatively plentiful, but the northeastern Indians had only very primitive tools with which to fashion the tubular beads, called wampum, from the hard shells. Wampum was thus scarce and valuable. It was used for ornaments, treaty belts, yracantha, the Holiday Berry

By Joe Littlefield

SOME SHRUBS are popplar for a period of time then gradually disappear from the horticultural trade because they popularity. One of many popular shrubs that still are freely planted are pyracanthas. The main reason is for their showy berries that are harvested for the holiday Christmas sea-

Gardeners who prune their pyracanthas thoughtlessly are likely to cut off much of the flowering or berry-setting branches, which means none or few berries for the year-end.

These shrubs should be pruned annually if they are to grow as a shapely bush. They may be trained to grow in a spreading flat form espalliered), providing the long lateral branches are anchored in a horizontal position.

OCASIONALLY a pyracanthy plant may become infected by fire-blight, causing the leaves to grow stunted, branches and leaves to die back. Gardeners generally cut back the dead branches to healthy branch wood, and disinfect the prune shears in a fungicidal solution or hold the cut blade and anvil of the shears over a flame. Cutting the infested branch or branches back doesn't stop the infection. Eventually the plant will die.

There were two schools of thought concerning the cause of the infestation. The first was supposedly caused by bees. As the bees visited the healthy flowers after having first visited the blossoms of an infected pyracantha, they spread the blight. Later, it was thought that flies spread the disease, The latest belief is that the blight may be air borne, attacking the young tender foliage as the blossoms appear. Gardeners that have lost a pyracantha or two, usually when the plants are some years old, should annually spray the healthy plants with a fungicidal spray during the brief but critical time when the foliage is very young and tender.

BIRD OF PARADISE plants need some grooming and pepping up. A nurseryman who grew many bird of paradise for the retail tradé once told me he believes that such a plant would thrive if it were planted on a pile of manure. This means gardeners could help plants ting a two or three-inch layer of manure around The sensible way would be to check the soil around plant trunk. If it is too high, or a mulch put on the previous year that hasn't all disappeared into the soil, the high portion should be scraped off and the soil thoroughly soaked. Bone meal should be scattered around the plant, lightly scratched in, then manure applied and slowly but thoroughly soaked. The soil should be kept moist the first few days, then watered as it dries.

Feed plant about a month and a half later with a general all-purpose plant food, but one that has more phosphoric acid than nitrogen. Fertilize twice more at six to eight-week inter-side of the leaf stalk. The nubbin is several inches above the base of the leaf. Just below it is the hollow area on down to where the leaf stalk joins the plant. Within that hollow area grows a flower spike in season if the plant is a mature blooming plant, or a new leaf may be forming within that section. You don't know whether there is a new leaf within that hollow portion, hence cut just above the nubbin which insures avoidance of cutting into the hollow leaf stalk section. Later as remainder leaf stalk stub dies back and no new growth ap-pears, cut back the old stub or stubs down to the base of the plant.

Recipe of the Week

Pierre, owned by Alma Franke, like most poodles learned easily to walk on hind feet and to "beg."

CALIFORNIA'S heritage of things Spanish and Mexican makes foods of these origins of special interest. Such is that for heef enchiladas submitted by Mrs. Stephen Labinski, 2540 Eucalyptus Ave., Long Beach.

The recipe:

Beef Enchiladas

- 1 lb. ground beef 1/2 tsp. salt
- ½ lb. cheddar cheese, grated, reserve 1 cup.
- olives (41/2 oz. can) 12 tortillas purchased
- can chopped green 2 cans tomato sauce
- I can tomato paste 1 can tomalo soup 2 cups water
 - 1/2 cup cooking oil
 - 2 tblsp. chili powder I tsp. garlic powder
 - 1/2 tsp. sult

Mix ingredients, bring to boil, then simmer. Dip tortillas in hot sauce, place on a plate and put a heaping tablespoon of meat mixture in center. Fold one side over the other to cover meat, Lay. folded side down in baking dish close together and pour over the enchiladas a cup of the sauce. Place in 350-degree oven for 15 minutes. Before removing from oven, sprinkle with grated cheese. When cheese melts, serve with remaining sauce and a salad.

What's your favorite recipe? For each recipe published in this space, Southland will pay $5. Men are urged to submit their recipes along with the ladies. Send yours, with name and address to Recipe Contest Editor, Southland Magazine, 604 Pine Ave., Long Beach, Calif. 90801.

Gently fold honey, vinegar, celery seed and salt into sour cream. Chill several hours to blend flavors.

Gardening Tips

GRASS LAWNS may be planted any time of the year. Dichondra grows fast during hot weather, hence may be set out during the spring and summer season mainly.

CAMELLIAS will blossom more freely if they do get several hours of sun.

VIRURNUM ROBUSTUM is a winter blooming shrub. Landscapewise, it is an upright growing plant and fits narrow spaces where such shrubs may be needed.

and especially on the parting shot as the latest Miss Universe left town.

But the pageant continued on in "playsuits y o u can even go to the super-market in."

BUT IT WAS the lack of anything covering the upper strata that bolstered the world's interest in the new Miss IBC in Long Beach.

A beautiful Miss Holland, Katinka Bleeker, raised international eyebrows for a couple of reasons.

A not-so-minor, but important point of which pageant officials had not been aware, was the fact the beauty had spent a year as a showgirl in Las Vegas - the topless kind.

But the Dutch consul, who could overlook that fact of nature, jumped to the defense of American-Dutch relations when Miss Bleeker went on to charge that the American showgirls in the gaming city are "mostly prostitutes."

Then came charges from South America that the conservative playsuits were good only for skinny girls and that most of the Latin senoritas were hippy and the suits emphasized that point.

Said one - shapely Miss Puerto Rico, 35-24-371/2: "All the judges are interested In Is bones, bones, bones.

THE SECURITY of the pageants which compares favorably with that of the Kremlin in Moscow-has come in for its share of knocks over the years. One from Diana Westbury, Miss England in 1963, summed it up simply.

She was quoted by Reuters news agency as saying:

"We had to ask permission even to go to the bathroom."

Another Britisher apparently had another outlook on "life in these United States pageants." She refused to pose for photographers or talk to reporters.

The conservative Wall Street Journal pointed this out in an article on Long Beach's beauty efforts entitled "Lovely Legs and Lively Brains Help Sponsors Reap Publicity and Profits."

Quoting from reporter Thomas W. Bush's story:

"To tell the truth, the more uproar the better. For the motive of the global quest for beauty is publicity, and the motive for the publicity is profit."

But to get readers through the story of the economics of the show for his business-minded clients, Bush started out his story telling how the Georgian peaches brought by Miss Georgia to the pageant as gifts were confiscated by the bughunting officials of the state's Department of Agriculture.

THE JOURNAL'S headline writer took it from there:

"Beauty and the Bugs, Or How 76 Fair Ladies Launch a Million Lines.

This year there will be 90 beauties who pageant officials hope will launch more than a million lines-competing in the International City April 18-30.

The show is being held in April-after an absence of 20 m onths - to take advantage of being the first beauty pageant of the year.

And, says Director Wayne Dailard, IBC will be the biggest pageant in the world this year. Beauties from 50 states will compete for Miss American Beauty, then 39 foreign competitors will vie for the title of Miss International Beauty.

There will be more than 90 stories, however, if enterprising reporters are given half a chance.

Then, of course, pageant officials do their bit - although ofttimes unknowingly -- to help the publicity stream.

For example, this year they named California State College at Long Beach coed Ella Wilson as Miss Welcome to Long Beach - official hostess for the city.

But Miss Wilson lives In Los Altosa suburb of San Francisco.

Perfect for the Role

THE MENU, one of the most distinguished in Southern California, is in French, with English translations in smaller type. It lists such epicurean accomplishments as truite sautee Amandine (boneless trout sauteed with almonds); filets de boeuf Beverly (tenderloin of beef flamed with branch) and entrecote double aux pomme souffles (a handsome New York steak. served for two persons with souffle potatoes and Bordelaise sauce.)

The restaurant is Chez Cary, 571 S. Main St., Orange, a magnificently designed continental establishment with a bold but beautiful color scheme accented by reds, blues, silver and crystal. The moment you sten in the door you realize yo'u are in a restaurant where the cuisine and service will be extraordinary.

Geril Muller, a tall, Denmark-born restaurateur and interior decorator. In manner and gesture he is such a perfect host that he appears to have been elected for the role by central casting at MGM or 20th Century-Fox. His background reflects quality and elegance. After four years of study at the Copenhagen Hotel and Restaurant School, he served royalty at Denmark's Royal Gun Club. Later h e was associated with Scandia in Los Angeles, the Beverly Hills Hotel; the Fountainbleau, Miami; Stork Club, New York, and Ernie's, San Francisco.

The menu at Chez Cary i s essentially a la carte, but three complete dinners are offered nightly, including soup du jour, tossed salad, entre, dessert and coffee. They are $5 to $8. Closed on Sundays, the restaurant serves dinner daily from 6 p.m. on. Luncheon, emphasizing such glories as eggs Benedict and chicken Suzette Princess, is Monday through Friday, from 11:30 a.m. on.

SUNDAY TREATS -

Most of the knowledgeable restaurant-goers in Belmont Shore are aware that the Leilani, 5236 E. Second St., serves wondrous Cantonese family dinners, $5 for two persons; $6 for two and $9 for two. Some aren't aware however, that this tropical dinner house also features generous American dinners, from $2.85. Offered are such beautifully prepared entrees as broiled . steaks, chicken, sirloin tips, lobster, shrimp, halibut and scallops, with soup of the day, to ssed salad, baked Idaho potato or rice and coffee

TELEVISION LOG OF THE EVENING NEWS AND THE INDEPENDENT-PRESS-TELEGRAM,

New Talk Show Bishop Bucks 'Tonight'

By GEORGE ERES TV Editor

The American Broadcasting Co., third-largest television network, trying harder for a share of the late-TV-watchers, makes a bid for them Monday night when the Joey Bishop Show premieres on channel 7.

The 90-minute show — live and in color — starts at 11:30 p.m., Mondays through Fridays, the same hours filled by the National Broadcasting Co.'s "Tonight Show," until recently reigned over by Johnny Carson.

Carson's replacement until Friday is Jimmy Dean. The following week, Bob Newhart, recently signed to a long-term contract by the network, takes over for a week — and possibly longer if Carson decides against returning. However, the network says it considers Carson under contract until 1970 and the welcome home mat is still

Back here on the west coast, meanwhile, Bishop has been working like a beaver getting his show ready to compete with the undisputed champ, "Tonight."

His producer is Paul Orr, who produced Jack Paar's "Tonight Show" and weekly variety hour telecasts. Johnny Mann is music

Wide Open Door

Honor Blackman and Tony Randall co-star as leaders of a daring bank robbery in ABC Slage 67's 90-minute presentation of T. E. B. Clarke's comedy, "The Wide Open Door," in color at 9:30 p.m., Thursday. (See Special Page 12).

Attitude Toward U.S. Examined

Since the death of John F. Kennedy the attitude of Western Europe to the United States has changed from deep sympathy to suspicion. Why this happened will be examined at 6:30 p.m. Sunday on channel 4 in "The View from Europe."

"This situation has been created by the fact that Europeans feel an apparent absence of American policy and direction there and also an inability to understand U.S. involvement in Vietnam, says George A. Vicas, producer of the program. Must Americans seem unaware of the vauum left in Europe."

NBC News London bureau chief Elie Abel wrote the script and will also be the reporter for the program.

Abel and Vicas talked with many people for their impressions as to the reasons for the change in attitudes.

Brief excerpts of what some of those interviewed said follow:

Alfred Grosser, professor at the Institute of Political Science in Paris, says, "It is the first time in the 20th century that the French feel secure. That is they were afraid of Russia, of Germany, then of Germany and Russia, by both, and finally today by nobody."

Professor Richard Lowenthal of the Free University of Berlin, offers this opinion. The United States has been so preoccupied with the apparently, more urgent problems of the Pacific theater, of the war in Vietnam, and the rising power of China, that they have given far less attention to the apparently less urgent problems of East-West conflicts in Europe.

Paul-Henri Spaak, former secretary general of NATO and for many years foreign minister of Belgium, says in part, "I regret that American policy in Vietnam is being more and more criticized by public opinion in Europe. Europeans do not understand the problems of the war in Vietnam."

I CAN'T help but think the King Family's appearance on the Hollywood Palace was nothing short of "marvelous." After all, where else can you find such a musical, wholesome and gracious family? Is there any chance the Kings will be back on a regular basis? I surely hope so as they are great!

Ruth M. Ruud

.Thus far, they have no regular show, their agent says, but they will be making guest appearances from time to time.

WE WOULD appreciate any information and vital statistics on the singer John Davidson — Andy Williams' summer replacement in 1966. What is he doing now; where is he; does he have any upcoming movies; will he replace Andy in 1967.

T.N. and A.B.

Davidson currently is working on a picture at Walt Disney Studio, "The One and Only, Genuine, Original, Family Band." He has made one other film for Disney, "The Happiest Millionaire." He will not Williams replace Andy this summer.

AFTER watching "Star Trek" for some time now, I've come to the conclusion that Dr. McCoy is too emotional, Mr. Spock is too logical and Captain Kirk worries too much.

With all these problems, it's wonderful the way they can function so efficiently aboard The Enterorise!

bara Parkins and James Douglas are the best actress and actor on "Peyton Place" so I enjoyed the interview on Barbara and the TV Profile on James Douglas by Vernon Scott last Sunday. It would be nice if Barbara could make it in the movies.

Last Sunday Lloyd Shearer (Parade Magazine) spoke of all the foreign stars taking over the indus-try. But I don't see why more television stars couldn't make it if they could have more publicity.

I LET my children stay up late and watch Stage 67-Negru humor, This was after the start of the program when a Negro Santa Claus said, "You want a WHAT Christmas? Then one Negro said to the other he could make him white and threw white powder all over him. Toward the end of this very short hour the harrible word "nigger" was used about a dozen limes in such a way it didn't sound so insulting.

Dr. ROWAN Says: You're better off ...taking a little longer to pay, and buying better Dental Plates are so important to you ... can make such a difference in how you feet and how you look that modern dental science has developed. Every plate fitted in my office receives the same high standard of close professional attention. Prices vary, depending on the type and quality of the artificial teeth you prefer. For the slight difference in cost, you're better off choosing the best ... and my Liberal Credit Plan makes it easy for you. On approval of your credit, you can spread the small monthly payments over any reasonable time.

CHARGE FOR CREDIT

No interest, no carrying charges, no bank or finance company to deal with. IT'S AN EXTRA SAVING FOR YOU, because my prices stay low, regardless of how much credit you need. On approval of your credit, you can spread the small monthly payments over any reasonable length of time, without extra charges of any kind. So don't let lack of cash keep you - or any one in your family - from getting needed dental work completed right now.

UNION DENTAL PLAN SERVICE

My office provides all types of dental work under Union or California Dental Service Programs. Where part of the payment is made by the patient,

Excerpted Reviews from Television Critics

FROGRAM: "Dick Van Dyke" Special, aired Tuesday on channel 2.

. He collaborated in the writing of his own show and invested his impressive energies in just a few of his mime, song, dance, harpsichord playing and, best of all, his stylish brand of slapstick comedy. Marvelous, too, was his skit about the comeback performance of the famous 97-year-old magician . can carry a tune with the best of them . . . delightful pantomime ... one-man bundle of talents . . .

-George Gent, N.Y. Times

. . An impressive demonstration of versatility . . . and the star was both amusing and lovable all the way . .

-Cynthia Lowry, AP

Van Dyke did a bit of everything in show business on his first of a series of specials and while he is a superior comic and comic dancer, there are some things he does less well than others. But whatever he does, he does with a boyish charm that disarms criticism. One would not yell encore at his harpsichord playing, for example, but one is inclined to want to pat him on the head encouragingly. And despite an overly long portrayal of an aged magician making a comeback which made me squirm, I'd watch a reprise of the show, if only to see him dance and do the bit with his partner battling over a piece of lint --- a piece of artisty in pantomime.

-George Eres, JPT

PROGRAM: "I'm Going to Ask You to Get Up Out of Your Seat," aired Tues-day, channel 2,

... Fascinating British view of Evangelist Billy Graham during his crusade of Greater London last June . . . The larger fascination of this program was in the following of the step-by-step efficiency of organization workers in setting up and carrying out the Graham Crusade . . . The most revealing por-tions were those that explained how closely Gra-ham works with churches at the local level, for these sequences provide a clue to one of the reasons that the evangelist is so popular with many clergymen . . Persons who came forward to declare themselves for Christ at the evangelist's meetings were refereed to specific churches and clergymen near their homes.

-Rick DuBrow, UPI

PROGRAM: "Block Party," aired Wednesday night on channel 4.

Danny Thomas' special was built around a theme that has become a sort of television cliche - a lot of rich performers with dia mond rings and suede shoes mourning the good old days when they were poor and hungry . . . Thomas has a tendency to get sticky when he starts to sermonize.

WIDE OPEN DOOR ---Tony Randall and Honor Blackman each play dual roles in "ABC Stage 67's" tour de force of a daring bank robbery carried through with the unwitting aid of Scotland Yard. The aid of Scotland Yard. The 90-minute tonguc-in-cheek drama by T. E. B. Clarke, who won an Oscar in 1952 for his "Lavendar Hill Mob," was produced and directed by Franklin Schaffner and airs at 9:30 p.m., in color, ch. 7. Featur-ing Reginald Gardiner, Ber-nard Fox, Richard Haydn, Leon Ames and J. Pat O'Malley, story deals with pretty crime-loving identical twins who convice a swave ex-con to impersonate an incapacitated (broken leg) Scotland Yard inspector, while the twins keep the real inspector away from his office, (Se-ries returns to regular formin, format next week for a reprise of John Le-Carre's "Dare I Weep, Dare I Mourn.")

※ SPECIAL

A NEW TV SEASON How a program makes the schedule in prime-time commercial television is examined during an hour-long amined during an nour-long public TV special at 7:30 p.m., ch. 28. Syndicated TV columnist Ernie Kreiling leads a panel of programming vice presidents from the three networks in a preview and evaluation of the new fall season.

HOLLYWOOD PALACE — Wearing seven different gowns custom-made at $2,000 each, $500,000 of her own jewelry and a hairdo which included flying in her own hairdresser from New York, eternal glamour queen Joan Crawford reigns as hostess to Tim Conway, Nancy Ames, Julius LaRosa, the Cyrkle, the Halasis, the Flying Cavarettas and magician Ralph Adams. During the 9:30 p.m. color hour, ch. 7, Miss Crawford performs another reading by Milton Geiger, in response to generous praise for her Geiger momologue on her last Palace appearance, (Show is preempted next week for the finals of the International_Beauty Pageant from Long Beach.)

director and Regis Philbin, who has had a few shows of his own, will be permanent announcer.

The show's physical format will be similar to the "Tonight Show." Joey said he would sit at a desk, but would not open the show with a stand-up comedy monologe as Carson does.

"I will walk out and plead my case," said Joey. "I'll ask for five minutes of sympathy. After that, if ABC hasn't moved the furniture out, I'll go right up to the desk and sit down."

Lineup of guests for the opening show includes Governor Ronald Reagan, Danny Thomas, Debbie Reynolds and Judge Noel Cannon, female traffic court judge.

There are lots of names available in Hollywood where the Joey Bishop Show originates, but there probably won't be any more Hollywood glitter on his show than on say, the Mery Griffin or the Tonight. Show or any show that fea-tures guest stars. The ones who aren't afraid of ad-lib show up on all these shows.

There are writers, of course, but the plan is to keep the show spontaneous. There are inevitable brief silences in this type of show and the trick is to keep from allowing anyone to become uncomfortable.

But in most cases, it's not the guests who make or break the late shows -- it's the personality of the star. Joey's wit and personality already has won a certain following and he hopes to get more of the late-night viewers - not necessarily drawing them away from "Tonight," which has an estimated 3 to 4 million viewers, but from the some 8 million others who watch old movies and local talk shows,

The new Overmyer Network, scheduled to start a late show from Las Vegas May I, with Bill Dana as host, also has its eye on these millions of viewers who presumably have no "TV home.".

The advertisers like the late spots. One view is that the watchers are made up of the white-collar, moneyed class that can afford to stay up because it doesn't have to get to work early. If you don't buy that, you will recognize this basic economic fact: the late hours are known as "Class C Time" under the National Association of Broadcasters' Code. This means: 16 minutes, 20 seconds of commercials per hour are permitted as compared with 10 minutes, 20 seconds of commercials between 7:30 and 11 p.m. The advertisers are reportedly waiting in line.

What's Joey's line on lots of late night viewing?

"I think it may create a new habit - lots of late evening viewing."

O, Is it true that Tony Armstrong-Jones' mother is running for the British House of Commons? Is it true that the Democrats in California will nominate either Gregory Peck or Sandy Koufax to run against Tom Kuchel for the U.S. Senatel-Vivian Ealy, Bakersfield, Calif.

A. Mrs. Honald Armstrong-Jones, 28, Lord Snowdon's stepmother, hopes to stand for Parliament as a Conservative in the next British general election. Democratic leaders in California are trying to get Peck to oppose Kuchel in the U.S. senatorial race. Since Ronald Reagan's election as governor of California, the feeling is widespread that a candidate needs no previous political experience to win high office. What he needs is a pleasant, popular image. Certainly screen star Peck has that. On the other hand, it is felt that Koufax, a former baseball pitcher, might be unable to win the female vote. Many Democrats believe that Peck is a natural for the position of U.S. senator from California, since the Republicans could not oppose him on the ground of his being a politically inexperienced actor without damaging the presidential aspirations of Ronald Reagan.

How to enjoy regularity even during the middle and later years of your life

True Facts About Irregularity

Question: Do I face any special constipation difficulties as I grow older?

Answer: As you enter your middle years, you may find that you are more and more troubled by irregularity.

Question: What can cause this "middle age" irregularity?

Answer: Constipation often results from a lack of enough moisture in the food waste which slows up elimination.

Question: Can I help overcome this problem?

Answer: The fact is, your daily intake of food may lack enough of a gentle laxative ingredient that is known as hydrogel. The addition of an adequate amount of hydrogel to your diet could bring really effective relief from constipation.

Question: How can I get enough hydrogel?

Answer: You could eat more fruits and vegetables . . . probably a great deal more than you do. Or, you can take a hydrogel concentrate like Serutan.

Question: Why should I take Serutan?

Answer: The hydrogel substance found in Serutan holds up to 20 times its volume in water. It is this lack of moisture that may be causing your irregularity.

Question: How does Serutan work?

Answer: Entirely differently from pills, oils or harsh chemical laxatives. Taken daily, gentle Scrutan simply provides the hydrogel help you need to get you regular and keep you regular. You must be satisfied or your money back from Scrutan. Try Scrutan today.

My Favorite Jokes

by Bob Blasser

EDITOR'S NOTE: Bob Blasser, 28, born and bred in Belmont, Mass., is a disciple of Red Skelton. "I don't want to sound like a corn ball, but, like Red, I believe that making people laugh is an extension of love." Blasser originally planned to become a priest. He studied at St. Columban's Seminary in Milton, Mass.; taught at Norton High School; entertained while working his way through Boston College:

He broke into highime show business by phoning Perry Como and assuming the voice of Jack Benny. Como was completely taken in, hired Blasser for his TV program. Benny later hired him, too, and Blasser was on his way. Bob has since played many of the major TV programs, worked as an actor and writer for Allen Funt's Candid Camera. Blasser is a bachelor, must complete one more course to get his Master's degree in literature at Roston College. Herewith a sampling of his jokes:

I love Florida. . . . I even have property there. . . . Recently they struck land on my property.

I know a kid who was expelled from public school. They caught him praying.

I'il never forget the first day I taught school. I walked into the assembly hall, and there they were in black leather Jackets, tight Levis, long sideburns — the faculty.

I knew a high school principal whose school was located in a very tough neighborhood. Instead of ending the school period by ringing a bell, this guy used to crawl from room to room, open the door a crack and throw in a tear-gas bomb. It got on his nerves so much that he retired. Now he's got a less nerve-racking job. He's a guerrilla fighter in Vietnam.

Recently I came down to Florida for a vacation and checked in at the Blitz Hotel. I wouldn't call the hotel cheap exactly, but the other morning when I plugged in my electric shaver, the elevator stopped running.

Modern science sure has advanced things. Electricity is a marvelous invention. Nowadays everything in the home is controlled by the switch—everything, that is, except the children.

A crapshooter walked up to a dice table in Las Vegas, laid down four $50 chips. He shook the dice, but, as he began to shoot, a third die slipped out of his sleeve. The croupier merely picked it up, handed it back to the roller, announced matter-of-factly, "Your roll, sir. Your point is 19."

THE SHOCKING STATE OF OUR FIRE PROTECTION

by Sid Boss and George Kiseda

Akron firemen remove body of one of three victims of recent multialarm fire. This city, like many other U.S. communities, has too few firemen, has been forced to close two tirehouses for lack of personnel.

t was close to noon on a lazy day, and the first two telephone calls to the volunteer fire department in Laytonsville, Md., produced a busy signal. The third call brought a response.

"There ain't nobody but me here at this moment," said a young volunteer. He said he was just "hangin' around" the firehouse.

"It's a 50-50 proposition," he said. "About half the time somebody's here."

He represented one more than the number of volunteers "hangin' around" the firehouse the year before, when Laytonsville had its biggest fire. The firehouse burned down.

The volunteer fire department lost not only its home but also three pumpers, a 2600-gallon tank truck, an ambulance, 32 sets of protective clothing and more than 3000 feet of hose. Estimated damage: almost $100,000.

With nobody in the fire station, the fire apparently had burned five to 15 minutes before it was discovered by an attendant in a gasoline station across the street. It was another 11 minutes before a nearby fire company arrived.

Laytonsville, a tiny community almost equidistant between Baltimore and Washington, found itself in the newspapers. "We got quite a bit of ribbing about it," says Fire Chief James Snyder, an assistant chief at the time of the embarrassment. "But when it happened, it wasn't very funny."

Laytonsville was lucky. Snyder remembers that the wind was blowing 35 to 40 m.p.h. out of the northwest, an unusual meteorological phenomenon for February. "It helped save a good part of the town," he says.

The surprising thing is that there aren't more Laytonsvilles with more serious consequences.

Every 24 seconds a fire breaks out somewhere in the U. S. Every 44 minutes somebody dies as a result of a fire. Fire losses last year reached an alltime high of $1.8 billion, according to preliminary estimates. There were approximately 12,100 fire deaths, 100 more than the year before.

William D. Buck, president of International Association of Fire Fighters, A.F.L.-C.I.O.:

"Perhaps a half-dozen paid fire departments in the United States have adequate manpower."

In calling recently for a federal Fire Safety Act, which would support pilot projects to improve the efficiency of fire-fighting. President Johnson noted that the U.S. per capita death rate through fire was, in 1965, four times as great as that of the United Kingdom and six times that of Tapan.

Some of the losses of property and lives could be prevented if our fire protection were what it should be—but it's not

In the U.S. it is actually a paradux of sorts. We have some of the best fire departments in the world (New York: Los Angeles; Memphis, Tenn.; Miami; Louisville, Ky.; Washington, D.C., etc.), but the quality is mostly in cities with quarter million or more in population (one notable exception: Pittsburgh). In suburbia, the smaller cities and rural America, the situation is often disturbing.

There are approximately 25,000 fire departments in the U. S., but only 1600 are fully paid. That leaves most of the country's geography and much of its population in the hands of a hodge-podge of volunteers—some paid, some unpaid—who may or may not be available when the siren summons them. By the standards of agencies that grade communities for insurance companies, more than three-quarters of the municipalities surveyed in the 10,000-to-50,000 population category have poor fire protection. The delinquents include some of our fanciest suburbs. "I'd say," says Percy Bugbee, general manager of the National Fire Protection Association, "that there are actually a little over 100 wellmanned, quality fire departments in the U.S. that are fully capable of handling almost any kind of firefighting situation."

Lower Merion, Pa., just west of Philadelphia, is "Main Line" suburbia, a community of $100,000 homes, where the average household income is $23,000 a year—after taxes. Lower Merion spends about $4 per person on fire protection each year.

There are seven firehouses in Lower Merion, each with two paid drivers, who work in shifts—24 hours on, 24 hours off. An additional paid daytime fireman recently was authorized for each company. Otherwise, Lower Merion relies on unpaid volunteers, many of whom are in Philadelphia during the day.

Like most communities with volunteer fire departments, the township has good fire equipment. But who mans it if a fire breaks out during the day in a school or a large apartment building?

"They're pressing their luck," says Philadelphia Fire Commissioner James J. McCarey. Township Manager John F. Scull Jr., while admitting they have their fingers crossed, insists Lower Merion can handle the problem.

James W. Mullin, the township's salaried superintendent of fire, concedes he'd feel more comfortable with a nucleus of paid firefighters—augmented by volunteers. He points out, though, that two companies automatically respond to all building fires, and he can't ever remember a turnout of less than a dozen.

Philadelphia's McCarey says Lower Merion can afford a paid fire department and ought to have one, pointing up the fact that the men are away at work during the day, leaving their most valuable possessions—their wives and children—in the custody of volunteer firelighters. "These are big-business men," McCarey says. "They wouldn't let amateurs run their businesses."

Lower Merion has one of the better volunteer fire departments ("an excellent apparatus plant . . . competent leadership," says one insurance rating expert). But it had a whopper of a fire in 1965—a $5 million loss in a paper products plant. One authority says there "are people of the impression it could have been contained." Mulfin doesn't like to talk about it. "I wouldn't care to continent on that fire too much," he says.

If Lower Merion is something less than perfect, what about Stratford, Wis., and Vicksburg, Miss., and Lovington, N. Mex.?

In Stratford, a department-store fire mushroomed into a $330,000 loss. It happened during the fishing season, and all but two members of the volunteer fire department were out of lown.

In Vicksburg, a sawnill was destroyed when the undermanned fire department could not compete with a doubleheader fire. The loss was $300,000. When the lire first broke out, civilians came to the rescue of the fire department, which did not have enough manpower to operate its apparatus. Two hours and 15 minutes later, the fire was under control. But at 3 a.m., four hours later, the fire began to blaze again, and with the civilians asleep, the fire department was on its own. Besult: Vicksburg lost a sawnill.

In Lovington, the fire loss at a cottonstorage plant reached $1,700,000 following some curious FireFighting techniques by the local volunteers. First, they connected hoses to hydrants that drew water from the sprinkler system. Later, they decided to let the fire burn itself out, and all the apparatus except one engine company was returned to the station. An insurance man finally persuaded the firemen to come back and put the fire out. They did such an effective job that the fire broke out again the following night.

Warren Y. Kimball, manager of the National Fire Protection Association's Fire Service Department: "Fower than half of I marger

"Fewer than half of 1 percent (of the fire departments in the U. S.) can provide the proper measure of firefighting capability for successful performance at potentially serious fires in major structures."

Actually, it would be unfair to suggest that there is any lack of enthusiasm or dedication among the volunteers. And for the most part the equipment is good. But training programs runge from good to nonexistent, and a serious lack of manpower exists everywhere—in the suburbs and villages and even in many big cities.

According to one expert, professional firemen average three to four times as much instruction (something like 300 hours of supervised training a year after basic training), while "a volunteer does well to get in 100 hours a year."

And William D. Buck, president of the International Association of Fire Fighters, A.F.L.-C.I.O., contends that perhaps a half-dozen paid fire departments in the United States have adequate manpower."

Even if Buck has a fireman's ax to grind, what about the National Fire Protection Association?

The N.F.P.A. is a Boston-based, non-profit organization, dedicated to advance, by research and education, the protection of life and property from fire.

"Out of [all] the fire departments in the United States," says Warren Y. Kimball, manager of N.F.P.A.'s Fire Service Department, "fewer than half of 1 percent can provide the proper measure of firefighting capability for successful performance at potentially serious fires in major structures."

The agency that grades municipalities (of over 25,000) for their fire protection quality is the American Insurance Association, formerly the National Board of Fire Underwriters, The A.I.A. sends inspection teams of engineers into a cominunity and examines its fire department (manpower, apparatus, organization, fire-prevention program, etc.), its elimatic conditions, water supply, building and fire codes and how they are enforced. It then gives the fire department and the city grades—classifying by numbers one through ten. It is the A.I.A. gradings that guide insurance companies in establishing fire insurance rates.

Percy Bugbee, general manager of the National Fire Protection Association:

"I'd say that there are actually little over 100 well-manned, quality fire departments in the U.S. that are fully capable of handling almost any kind of situation."

It may startle the taxpayer who considers himself reasonably well protected that there are, in the opinion of A.I.A. only a handful of first-class fire departments in the U. S.—Los Angeles, Memphis, Louisville, Mianni, and Fresno and Bakersfield, Calif. (New York's is not rated but probably would be in Class 1.)

No city has ever been put in Class 1, largely because of deficiencies in building codes and climatic conditions. Classes 2 and 3 indicate good protection, and anything under Class 4 is poor fire protection. In the 25,000-to-50,000 population category, 62 percent of the communities have poor protection. In the 10,000-to-25,000 group, where the gradings are made by regional agencies, 85 percent of the suburbs, towns and villages surveyed simply do not measure up.

A minimum force of 12 plus a chief officer is required for a routine fire in a residential dwelling, according to the N.F.P.A. But it is not uncommon across the country for calls to be answered with three or four men, and sometimes you will see a truck go by with only a driver.

The key factor in firefighting is "initial response." It determines whether the first company on the scene can deal adequately with the fire during the first few minutes. This is the difference between little fires and big fires, between routine fires and runaway fires. A fireman's first duty is to save lives, but he can't be inside a building rescuing people and outside laying hose at the same time.

"If the local baseball team announced that it could only afford to field seven men," says Kimball, with an appropriate touch of sarcasm, "no one would expect it to play championship ball or even win a game. Yet hundreds of cities have decimated their firefighting teams so that literally one-, two- or three-man crews are often the rule rather than the exception."

If many fire departments don't have the manpower to fight fires, it follows that they don't have the manpower to prevent them. And it is in the are of fire prevention (i.e., regular inspection and educational programs) that great strides must be made, it has been demonstrated that cities with good fire-prevention programs cut their fire losses significantly. Yet only 20 percent of the nation's fire departments regularly inspect homes for fire hazards.

The importance of inspection is best illustrated, perhaps, by recalling a tragic fire at the Golden Age Nursing Home, Fitchville, O., in 1963, in which 63 elderly patients died. The volunteer fire company had never been inside the building until the night of the fire.

What can be done to improve the nation's fire defense?

- More firemen are needed to operate the apparatus and to conduct inspections.
- Generally, firemen are underpaid.
 Wage scales need to be made competitive. The cost is not outrageous. To the average citizen the difference between an adequately manned and an undermanned fire department is six cents a week, according to the N.F.P.A.
- Where there are volunteer fire departments, a core of paid, full-time professionals ought to be on duty around the clock. A community should not have to rely completely on the chance that the local embalmer, upon hearing the siren, will interrupt his work to go fight a fire.
- The taxpayer can demand modern building and fire codes with tougher enforcement. For wrist-slapping judges, who let landlords flout the law and get off with $25 fines, the letters-to-the-editor column of the local newspaper is a surprisingly effective medium for pressure and action. Politicians cau read.

Meanwhile, if the volunteer firemen in your suburb let a fire run away from them, don't blame the volunteers. They deserve more credit than they get, and, generally, you get the kind of fire protection you deserve—at that price.

You wouldn't expect a professional fireman to do a first-rate job of embalming. So why expect an embalmer to do a first-rate job of firefighting?

Competent family doctors like this one, who combine familiarity with patients, medical skill and bedside manner, are in short supply in the U.S. today.

THE FAMILY DOCTOR:

VANISHING BREED IN AMERICAN MEDICINE

by Lloyd Shearer

n Boston recently all 332 seniors in three medical schools were polled on what branch of medicine they planned to enter.
Not one answered general practice.

In other sections of the nation the future of general practice is almost as discouraging. Of approximately 250 Midwestern interns and residents questioned, only eight young hopefuls declared they wanted to become family doctors.

Since 1960 the number of full-time G.P.'s in this country has decreased 30 percent.

There are now only about 68,000 family physicians left in America. And like the trolley car, they are rapidly becoming a vanishing breed.

Why is it that more and more medical students sky from this remunerative and necessary branch of medicine?

Dr. William Molony (see cover), 88, one of the oldest practicing family doctors in the nation, says, "It's because general practice isn't as glamorous or fashionable as the specialties. It doesn't have the status it once had. That's not the way they play the game anymore. Being a family doctor is hard work, and I don't know if today's young physicians want to work that hard.

"When I first began my practice in Los Angeles," Dr. Molony recalls, "I used to charge $1 for an office call, $1.50 for a house call. Today, I charge $7.50. But in the old days the trolley lines used to shut down at 7 p.m., and to visit a patient I had to get on my bicycle and pedal. I practiced every kind of medicine there is or was pediatrics, brain surgery, obstetrics. You mention it, my partner, Dr. Francis Anton, and I—we did it. Seven days a week, up to 20 hours a day."

Over the years, Dr. Molony has brought more than 3000 babies into the world. "And I'm still looking after some of them, even though they're 60 and 65. There's a great deal of satisfaction in being a family doctor, in treating the whole man, in knowing, understanding and seeing how family traits are passed on from one generation to another. It may be old-fashioned, but it's a very humane way, a very good, satisfactory, uncompartmentalized way of practicing medicine."

Dr. Molony's son, William Jr., who shares offices with his father, is an orthopedist, a physician who specializes in diseases of the bones, joints, muscles, tendons, etc. He represents the modern breed, the specialist in medicine. He is typical of many medical sons whose fathers were family doctors.

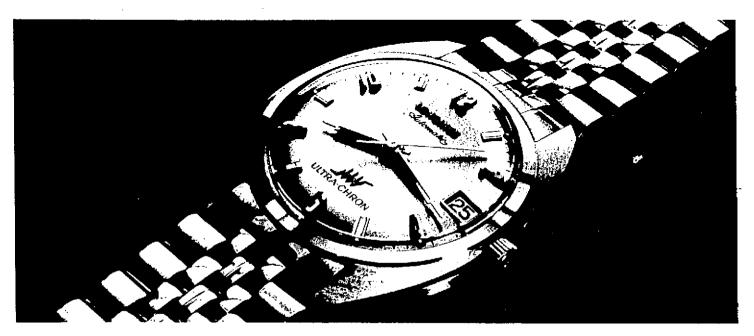

"I practiced general medicine for three years," the younger Dr. Molony confesses, "but somehow I never did understand how to cure a bellyache. It never intrigued me. As an assistant police surgeon during the Depression, I got a taste for trauma, and it never did leave me. In my father's time the facilities for medical specialties in this country weren't too good. Physicians who wanted to specialize had to go abroad. What physician raising a family had time or money to chuck his practice for two or three years? Not many. The result was, we had more G.P.'s than specialists.

"Today the avenues for specialization are great and varied. Medicine is being

GUARANTEED ACCURATE TO A MINUTE A MONTH

Accurate enough to navigate an airliner. Rugged enough for a man on the go. Handsome enough for a VIP. It tells you at a glance all you want to know about time—seconds, minutes, hours, the date. The incredible Ultra-Chron is the most precise automatic wrist watch in the world.

You never wind it. Never buy batteries for it. Never baby it. Longines' famous All-Proof® construction defeats moisture, shock, dust, magnetism.

The secret of Ultra-Chron's exquisite accuracy: It divides each second into tenths and measures each tenth so precisely that it gains or loses no more than one minute a month—one out of 43,200 minutes! Its accuracy is guaranteed to a mean average of 2 seconds per day. Yet Ultra-Chron needs no pampering. Your local Franchised Jeweler can give it all the service it will ever need.

The Ultra-Chron is Longines' ultimate achievement in a century of making the world's most honored watches. It is destined to become the most honored of all wrist watches.

See it at your local Longines-Wittnauer Franchised Jeweler. You'll be proud to own it—or give it.

Important Arthritis Information

"If there is any possibility that you have a rheumatic disease [including arthritis], see your physician. Don't delay. Early treatment can prevent crippling."

Your doctor will probably recommend aspirin in his treatment, because:

"Aspirin is the most reliable and least toxic of all arthritic drugs. It is the one that is most likely to provide sustained control of symptoms."

The quotations are from the folder, "Arthritis & Rheumatism," recently published by the U. S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare.

The makers of Bayer Aspirin urge you to remember this: Bayer is pure aspirin. Many of the other products that advertise arthritis benefits are part aspirin, but Bayer is pure aspirin, and aspirin is the drug doctors recommend for hours of continuous relief from arthritis pain, swelling and stiffness, so you can work, play and sleep in greater comfort.

If you suffer from arthritis, see your doctor at once.

fragmentized. Fewer and fewer men are interested in treating bellyaches, headaches and athlete's foot. Versatility in medicine no longer seems to be such a valuable virtue, which is why we're having more specialists than G.P.'s."

Today's medical students, a cross section of whom were interviewed by PARADE, say that they have been discouraged from entering general practice because the family doctor has been denigrated by medical educators, medical peers, by practically every medical society in the field except the American Academy of General Practice.

"The average family doctor," one Stanford student told PARADE, "has the lousiest reputation of anyone in the profession. In lots of cities they won't even allow him to practice in a decent hospital because he isn't board certified. There's a great deal of evidence that 'Old Doc' is undertrained, particularly by today's standards, and doesn't know his rear end from his elbow."

In Philadelphia another student pointed out a suspicion which has been statistically confirmed in many medical schools: The worst students in many graduating classes frequently gravitate to general practice. The best move forward to specialization.

Dr. C. Knight Aldrich, of the University of Chicago, writing on "The Crisis in General Practice," believes: "Medical students find general practice unattractive in part because of its relatively low prestige, in part because of the demands in time and energy made on the general practitioner and in part because of the example and attitudes of their teachers."

There is sufficient reason behind the low light in which many family doctors are held today. Simply, some of them are careless, inefficient, sloppy, unknowledgeable, behind the times in their practice.

In 1956 Dr. Osler Peterson, now of Harvard, in a famous University of North Carolina study, An Analytical Study of North Carolina General Practice, reported on 88 general practitioners at work. The report is hard to believe. Almost half (43 percent) of the G.P.'s studied did not practice the fundamental rules of sterilization. "The improper practice of using an unsterile instrument for acupuncture was observed. The same instrument was sometimes used repeatedly for successive patients, and inadequate sterilization was done between each use. An occasional physician used sterile instruments with unwashed hands, while others failed to wash their hands after obvious or presumptive contamination."

The report also revealed that 66 percent of the G.P.'s studied did not use their ophthalmoscopes on patients. An ophthalmoscope is used to examine the eyes for disease symptoms, especially high blood pressure. "Some doctors," Peterson reported, "owned ophthalmoscopes but never appeared to use them, while a few apparently did not possess one."

INEXCUSABLE NEGLECT

In the vast majority of examinations the G.P.'s failed to examine the rectal and vaginal organs of their patients. These procedures were omitted 83 percent and 64 percent of the time, even though such exams are primary in the detection of cancer. Such neglect is inexcusable.

The shocking incompetence of the G.P. was later corroborated by Dr. Kenneth R. Clute, who in 1963, after a sixyear study of 86 Canadian G.P.'s, published The General Practitioner, a study of general practitioners in two provinces of Canada.

Dr. Clute concluded that 40 percent of his colleagues "were thought likely to expose their patients to serious risk," so poorly and unscientific were they practicing their medicine.

G.P.'s refute such studies with the tired old homily, "There are a few rotten apples in every barrel," implying that most of the apples are good. But the truth is that when physicians themselves choose doctors to care for their own families, they almost always reject the general practitioner. They choose instead a specialist or subspecialist, generally an internist, connected with a hospital, a board certified specialist in internal medicine who has taken at least three extra years of training above the minimum required for a license and who in addition has passed a rigorous examination in his specialty.

In 1962 the School of Public Health and Administrative Medicine at Columbia University published The Characteristics of Hospitals and Physicians Used For Medical Care By New Jersey Physiclans and Their Families.

The report revealed that from 1955 to 1958, in a sample of 468 New Jersey physicians, including G.P.'s themselves, 99 percent had chosen specialists to look after their families.

The average American, whose knowledge of quality medicine is minimal, prefers the general practitioner to the specialist until he gets "really sick" or wants a "complete checkup."

Until that time he considers the G.P. a friendly, reliable, reasonable, accessible jack-of-all-trades, who can deliver a baby as well as sew up Junior's cut. He regards him as a family diagnostician, a psychiatrist substitute, a medical coordinator of sorts, and he patronizes him to the point where the average industrious G.P. in this country now grosses between $40,000 and $50,000 per year and has more patients than he can handle.

This is the paradox of general practice in America, Although he is wellliked by the medically ignorant layman -the man-in-the-street, who resents the impersonal, assembly-line nature of group and specialist practice-the general practitioner is regarded within his own profession as the low man on the totem pole, who is relatively untrained in surgery, internal medicine, obstetrics, orthopedics, etc., and yet practices them all, sometimes to the detriment of his patients.

What is the answer? The public wants and needs the G.P. with his comfort, solace, sympathy and relief. This is particularly true in the rural, less popu-

The Doctors Molony, William and William Jr., typify many father-son teams in medicine; the father is a family doctor, son a specialist. Elder Dr. William Molony has been practicing medicine since 1901.

lated areas, where most physicians prefer not to practice. Yet the peers of the medical profession claim that scientific knowledge is expanding at such a quantum rate that many G.P.'s have neither the time nor background to acquire itone major reason why the doctor-patient relationship in America is rapidly going down as the number of malpractice suits goes up.

One obvious answer is to provide the nation with a physician who is both a warmhearted family doctor and a highly trained specialist, offering the virtues of both. To produce such a man the jackof-all-trades role which the G.P. now plays in medicine will have to be somewhat curtailed-i.e., eliminate his surgery and elevate general practice to the specialty classification.

THE G.P. SPECIALTY

- If the American Academy of Family Practice and the American Medical Association succeed in their bid to promote general practice to the 20th recognized specialty, it'll be the first new one created since preventive medicine 19 years ago.
- The plan envisages adding many G.P.'s as medical school instructors. Those roles are now largely held by specialists, thus depriving students of a G.P. model image. It would continue in hospitals where G.P.-oriented interns and residents would hold clear G.P. status and train in that field. Finally, a new "American Board of Family Practice" would examine candidates and award specialist ratings to be reviewed periodically.

Plans to produce a better-trained G.P., and thereby perpetuate the breed, are already underway at the Universities of Oregon, Tennessee and Kansas. This fall, when the Pennsylvania State College of Medicine opens in Hershey, Pa., it will offer a full-time faculty in the new department of family and community medicine. As part of their training, young medical students will take care of the same families for four years, handling minor physical and emotional ailments. The object, according to Dean George T. Harrell, is to interest students in family medicine so that later they will want to specialize in it.

In America today there are three times as many specialists as general practitioners. Unless some redress takes place in medical education, the family doctor in this country is en route to extinction. Without replacements, the end of the 20th century will find him only a memory.

WHEN YOU USE LUNETTE RADAR GLASSES, YOU never guess if you're fishing in the right spot.

You KNOW for sure. That knowledge is power! The power to penetrate 2 to 12 feet or more right through the surface to the bottom of swift-running streams, deep into lakes...ponds...ocean holes...down into brush piles ... weeds.

The power to view schools of fish invisible to the naked eye before you even drop your line.

The power to see clearly way down deep as you've never been able to do before-so you can expertly manipulate your line and lure at the sight of that all-important first momentwhen the fish is ready to strike.

The power to take thrilling strike after strike without wasting a moment's pleasure by just following the time-tested rule every smart fisherman knows by heart: FISH WHERE THE FISH AREI

Fish can run-but they can't hide. Not from you!

Try seeing down below the surface without these patented "fish finders". Impossible. No matter how hard you stare or shield your eyes, the mirrorlike reflection of clouds, sun, or sky stops you cold. LUNETTE RADAR GLASSES are polarized to eliminate glare. Scientifically designed hooded lens concentrates glare-less polarized light where it really pays off: Even 10 to 12 feet below the water where the fish are! With radar vision like this, you pierce the surface...look deep into the water not on it...pinpoint exactly where fish may be lurking...or

AME VIEW WITH LUNETTE RADAR GLASSES This shot was taken with Lunette Radar Glasses over the camera lens. Now you can see INTO the water to spot fish and know exactly what's going on BELOW the surface. Without tunette Radar Glasses, you'd probably passing the by this great fishing location.

Father!

IN THE EARLY mists of the grey dawn, French fishermen on the Cher River near Chenonceaux observed a strange sight: two men wearing dark glasses sat pecring intently into the water. After a few moments, they would haul the tiny anchor of their outboard runabout and move. From this new spot they would gaze again into the water through their dark glasses. Once more, they moved on. Finally, after another move, they stopped. Smiles creased their faces. One of the men had hooked a gleaming pike.

Why the frequent shifts? Why the dark glasses? Why didn't these sportsmen remain in one spot and wait patiently for something to strike, as fishermen have always done? And why, suddenly, did they finally hook the big ones?

Why, indeed! These two were the very first Frenchmen to be wearing LUNETTE RADAR GLASSES. They could actually see below the water...where the fish were.

Now, this amazing optical discovery is available in limited supply in the U.S.A.

Can't have salt?

If you've just been put on a low-sodium diet, then you know what a difference salt makes. There are a lot of salt substitutes around, and that's exactly what they taste like. Adolph's doesn't, it really tastes like salt, it even looks, seasons, and sprinkles like salt. In fact, it's so close to the real thing, you can use it in cooking without objection from the rest of the family.

It has no metallic aftertaste, and it's approved by doctors for low-sodium diets. Look for it in the dietetic section at your market, regular or seasoned.

Yes, YOU Are Called To Be a PRIEST!

Every Christian is, according to the Bible.

Not a priest in the same sense as one ordained through the sacrament of Holy Orders. Not a priest who administers all the sacraments . . . who alone can consecrate the bread and wine into the Body and Blood of the Lord...whose only "career" is serving God.

But as a Christian, you belong to what St. Peter called "a kingly priesthood"...the body of the faithful to whom St. John (in Revelation) refers as "priests to God the Father." You are called to be a priest by virtue of the sacraments of Baptism and Confirmation, sealed by the Holy Spirit.

There was, therefore, nothing new or revolutionary in the action of the Vatican Council in calling for greater lay participation in the affairs of the Church. The Council was only reminding Christians of their right and duty to the apostolic life...and their priceless privilege as sharers in the mediation power of Christ,

In its decree on The Apostolate of the Laity, the Council sets forth the ways in which the Christian, living and working in the secular world, can fulfill his role of service to Christ and His church, "Indeed," says the decree, "the organic union of this body (the church) and the structure of the members are so compact that the member who fails to make his proper contribution to the development of the church must be said to be useful neither to the church nor to himself.'

Personal piety alone, the Council says, does not fulfill the Christian's obligation to apostolic action. He must also concern himself with the ills and problems and needs of the temporal world, seeking to transform and perfect all elements of the world and life for "God's plan for the world is that men should work together to renew and constantly perfect the temporal order."

The Council's decree on The Lay Apostolate is a document of extraordinary interest to all Christians, Catholic and otherwise. You will therefore, we hope, write today for a free copy of our new pocket-size pamphlet explaining the decree and what it should mean to your own Christian way

It covers such topics as The Vocation of the Laity, Objectives of the Lay Apostolate, Opportunities for Apostolic Activity, Forms of the Apostolate, and The Laity's Relationship to the Bishop and Priests. Of special interest is the application of these topics to current problems of a world still "groaning and waiting," as St. Paul said, "for final fulfillment and completion under the redeeming action of Christ."

LOOK WHO'S INVESTIGATING CONGRESSIONAL ETHICS!

by JACK ANDERSON

Watchdogs of ethics: Rep. Omar Burleson (D., Tex.) and Wayne Hays (D., O.) put heads together at House Administration Committee meeting. Their own records aren't unblemished.

Shell Oil Company Fodor-Shell Travel Guides, U.S.A., Box 12391 North Kansas City, Missouri 64116

oaded by the public outery against congressional misconduct, the House of Representatives voted an extra $50,000

earlier this year to police the morals of its members. The house cleaning was turned over to the tired and timid House Administration Committee, whose broomsweeps in the past have always aimed under the rug.

The chosen watchdogs are Rep. Omar Burleson (D., Tex.), the committee chairman who once contrived to charge the taxpayers for most of his reelection campaign and Rep. Wayne Hays (D., O.), the hot-tempered, trigger-tongued subcommittee chairman who traveled so much at the taxpayers' expense that he has been called the "Marco Polo of Congress." Both have covered up congressional improprieties in the past, including their own.

Four years ago, for example, I tried to tell these two about the payroll padding and global gallivanting of Rep. Adam Clayton Powell (D., N.Y.), but they refused to listen. PARADE had published an article of mine about "Congressine Who Cheat" (March 24, 1963). Next day Burleson seized the House floor and cried out: "We invite Mr. Anderson or anyone else who can support these charges to come before us in public hearings and reveal all or any part of the allegations in the article."

I accepted the challenge and came before Burleson's committee with a 14page statement. He refused to let me read it. All he wanted was identification of the congressman who had given me information.

"Will you name that member of Congress?" Burleson demanded.

"I will be pleased to identify a number of sources who can back up the article," I promised.

"Just name that one, and if you don't, we've had it," he huffed.

His challenge to me to face his committee, I charged, had been mere "bluff and bark."

"This meeting is definitely adjourned," he growled with an authoritative rap of his gavel.

I had intended to testify that Representative Powell had placed his wife. Yvette, on the public payroll under her maiden name; that her most pressing business with his congressional office had been a request for instructions in Spanish on how to play dominoes; that two beds, purchased with House funds, had been shipped to her in Puerto Rico at the taxpayers' expense; that Powell had collected $50,000 in "campaign expenses" to support the Republican ticket in 1956, and that the Democrats had raised the ante to $100,000 to get his support for the New York state ticket in 1958.

My statement would also have given the details of a deal between Rep. John McMillan (D., S.C.) and Senate aide Bobby Baker to get the performance bond on Washington's $21 million sports coliseum for insurance agent Don Reynolds. The grateful Reynolds gave Baker $4000 and bought a $5100 Cadillac for McMillan, who belatedly repaid him after the Washington Post began investigating. I had also been prepared to name names and cite the facts on a dozen other examples of congressional cheating.

After the committee refused to listen to my statement, PARADE published its highlights ("Is Congress Protecting Its Members Who Cheat?", May 5, 1963). Powell threatened to sue me for $1 million. McMillan wrote me an intimidating letter. The other congressmen issued denials and denunciations. But Burleson and Hays, like the monkeys who saw and heard no evil, kept their hands over their eyes and ears.

In time Powell changed his mind about suing. Baker's deals, including the one with McMillan, were investigated by the Senate. And the congressmen I had named took their explanations to their constituents. Some were defeated, others had close calls. Not until the public protest against Powell grew too loud to ignore, however, did Hays direct his subcommittee to investigate charges I had published four years ago-

Thus the public was treated to the spectacle of the modern Marco Polo investigating the travels of the Harlem globetrotter. Indeed, Hays broke off the Powell probe to lead a junket to Paris. This was not his first junket there; he had gone in 1963, taking along the House restaurant's headwaiter—at the taxpayers' expense, of course. "I thought he was a nice guy and deserved a break," explained Hays. People questioning the incident, he snorted, were "cheapskates."

Another charge against Powell was that he had used committee funds for personal purposes. Watchdog Hays, who investigated this contention, once billed the NATO Parliamentarians Conference account $115.89 in long-distance calls between his Washington office and Ohio district, five one-way trips from Washington to Ohio and 30 one-way plane fares from Washington to airports serving his hometown of Flushing, O The NATO Parliamentarians Conference, it should be noted, has absolutely no interest in Ohio.

Perhaps the most damaging complaint against Powell was his defiance of the courts, his attitude that he was above the law. While Hays has never defied the courts, he has shown the same arrogance. Buried in the police records of the little town of Uhrichsville, Q., is an incident worth relating. On the evening of Feb. 16, 1966, the congressman was clocked driving 39 miles an hour down Uhrichsville's narrow Decrsville Avenue. The speed limit was 25.

Patrolman Frank Barker gave chase, red light flashing, but Hays kept going. Not until the policeman began blinking his headlights did Hays finally pull over. "What's your big problem?" he demanded impatiently of Barker, the patrolman later related. Hays, according to the record, announced that he was a U.S. congressman and wrongly claimed immunity. Unimpressed, Barker asked for his license. Hays handed over a section of his billfold and told the patrolman to fish it out for himself. Twice Hays started to drive away, but stopped when Barker warned him.

After Barker located the license, he directed Hays to follow the police car to the station. The congressman snapped, "I'll do no such thing!" and sped away like a hotrod kid. This time Barker opened up his siren and roared off after him. Every time he caught Hays' car, the cowboy congressman snaked away through traffic. Once the patrolman thought he had Hays sandwiched between the patrol car and a parked car, but Hays shot into reverse like the runaway in a Keystone Cop comedy, After four similar near grabs, Barker decided it would be more in the interest of public safety to end his pursuit, Hays was charged with speeding, reckless driving and failure to obey a policeman's lawful order. The following Sunday an aide arrived at Uhrichsville courthouse to post $69 bond and to pick up the billfold section Hays had left the officer holding. Hays failed to appear at the hearing and forfeited the $69.

WHEN THEY SAID NO

Hays' subcommittee is part of the House Administration Committee, which approves all congressional expense vouchers. The past practice has been to accept all vouchers and requests that are submitted, only polite questions asked. One curious exception was the curt rejection recently of a request from House Banking and Currency Chairman Wright Patman (D., Tex.) for $14,000 to investigate banks. Normally this would have received routine approval.

Chief target of Congress' investigations has been New York Democrat Adam Clayton Powell.

But Hays, the subcommittee chairman, vetoed the request. He was upheld as usual by Burleson, chairman of the full committee.

Significantly, Hays is board chairman of the Citizens National Bank of Flushing and St. Clairsville, O. Indeed, he served on the House Banking and Currency Committee while the bank's charter was pending in the early 1950's. Burleson, too, had a financial interest in sidetracking Patman's investigation; he is a director of Abilene's Bank of Commerce.

Rep. Burleson shows copy of Parade article which launched storm over ethics.

Yet Burleson and Hays are now supposed to be keeping their colleagues on the straight and narrow. It should be fascinating to watch what they do about conflicts of interest. Certainly their past record should be comforting to the congressional chiselers.

Congressmen who take their wives on official trips, for instance, are not supposed to charge the taxpayers for distaff expenses. Yet repeatedly many have turned in hotel bills with the "and Mrs." crudely inked out-and Burleson, Hays and company have pretended not to see the alterations.

The Public Works Committee-after a pilgrimage to New York City to "investigate Long Island, N.Y., beach erosion"-sent Burleson ten Hotel Commodore bills with each congressman's "Mrs." carefully scratched out. The same sort of editing was found in bills from another congressional group which stopped at Miami's Biscayne Terrace Hotel "to study Miami harbor."

Although House rules forbid members from paying "unusual or exorbitant charges for meals," Burleson didn't question a $320.29 entry for one day's hotel restaurant charges submitted by former Rep. Clifford Davis (D., Tenn.). It has also been common practice for Burleson to approve bills on which drinking charges have been covered up by inking out "bar" and writing in "restaurant."

The expensively tailored Burleson is in no position to challenge other vouchers too closely, since his own bills wouldn't always stand scrutiny. During one shopping trip in Abilene, for instance, he charged the public for a $30 Thermos carafe set, a $30 Sheaffer pen set, a $19.50 calendar pad holder and a $5.95 door sign. He billed them to his House Administration Committee - the one overseeing ethics.

He also hit up the committee for $12 a day per diem for 84 of the 88 days from Oct. 1 to Dec. 27, 1958, plus 10 cents for each of the 1128 miles he drove throughout his district. Thus, while other congressmen were campaigning for reelection at their own expense, during the height of the campaign, in October, Burleson collected from the taxpayer for investigating "election matters." Indeed, he received payment for "investigative" work on weekends, Thanksgiving Day and Christmas. He put in no claims for per diem from Dec. 28 through New Year's Eve, but he could not resist another investigation. He and his wife turned up in New York City's Roosevelt Hotel for a four-day study of the Hatch Act. The records show he paid his wife's share of the room cost, but there were $130.67 in unitemized expenses.

Already, the House has had second thoughts about entrusting its ethics to the likes of Burleson and Hays. Even after voting them $50,000 ethics money, the House, feeling the hot breath of public indignation, took steps to create another special ethics committee.

But it will take even stronger measures to bring Congress-the vast majority of whose members are scrupulously bonest--up to the ethical standards of the other federal branches. I offered my own thoughts in the statement Burleson and Hays refused to hear four years ago. All that has happened in the meantime has strengthened my convictions. Here is what I tried to say:

"The only way to restore public confidence in Congress, in my earnest opinion, is to repeal the unwritten code against exposing congressional wrongdoers. I urge you to do away with double standards. Open up the vouchers on congressional overseas spending, publish your private holdings, identify your law clients, make public your oral and written communications to the other branches of government, live by the same code you demand of other officeholders."

American Motors, which sold 265.712 vehicles last year, has reduced its price below $2000 in an effort to bridge the price gap between foreign and domestic compacts. The company is offering more car for less money, hopes to make sizable inroads into the U.S. Volkswagen market.

Volkswagen is selling almost 15 times as many cars in the U.S. as its nearest competitor, despite claims by the competition that their cars are just as good as, if not better than, the VW.

What Volkswagen has which some foreign car makers lack is an extensive dealer organization throughout the U.S. It boasts 900 dealers, with parts and service available pretty nearly anywhere for the VW

The Japanese are rapidly moving into the U.S. car market. Sometime this year, Honda Motor Ltd., well-known for its Honda motorcycles, plans to sell in America what it is already selling in Europe -its four-cylinder, 70horsepower S-800 sports car, which is priced around $1800, gets up to 40 miles on a gallon of gas. Honda is also manufacturing a two-cylinder, four-seat economy coupé; the Honda 500, which was the hit of the recent Geneva Motor Show. The 500 has a frontwheel drive, a top speed of 75 miles per hour, will travel an incredible 55 miles on one gallon of gas. It sells in Switzerland for about $1000.

Every car manufacturer in the low-price field is gunning for Volkswagen, which confidently plans to sell 430,000 U.S. units this year

SVETLANA

STALIN'S DAUGHTER U.S. literary, lecture and theatrical agents say that Svetlana Stalina can easily earn $1 million in this country. Stalin's daughter, 42, speaks English passably, once worked as an English translator for the Progress publishing house in Moscow.

Her knowledge of life in the Kremlin during her father's regime is second to none from the standpoint of intimate revelations. TV networks would be willing to pay Stalin's youngest and only female child a pretty penny for her verbal memoirs. Written memoirs would, of course, be worth far more.

Basic reason Svetlana defected from Soviet Russia is that, since her father's death 14 years ago, she has become a near social outcast in Moscow. During the Khrushchev years Soviet officials, fearful of being seen with her, refused to invite her or her children to their homes. They shunned her, snubbed her, avoided her. For example, she was once very close to Gen. Stephan Mikoyan and his wife. Mikoyan is a crack test pilot and son of the wilv Soviet leader, Anastas Mikoyan. But the Mikovans dropped Svetlana a decade ago.

When Stalin was officially declared a monster by his successors, his daughter defended him when she could, pointed out that her father never ran Russia alone, that *others agreed with him."

Many Soviet leaders have secretly admired and respected her loyalty to her father, especially because Svetlana does not have too much reason to love his memory. Stalin destroyed her first marriage to Grigory Morozov, a young Jewish student whom she met at Moscow University. He exiled the talented engineer to a prison camp, where he died in the late 1940's. Svetlana's mother, a beautiful woman, Nadezhda Alliluyev, died or was killed in 1932 after a violent quarrel with Stalin. She was the dictators' second wife.

In 1956, Svetlana's elder brother, Vassily, a lieutenant general in the Soviet Air Force, whose drinking and debauchery sorely tried the patience of the Moscow police, died an alcoholic. He and Svetlana had been almost inseparable, particularly after their father's death.

Svetlana was reportedly earning only $200 a month at the time she left Moscow for India. Apparently she asked the Indians for asylum, but they were afraid to grant it. They did not want to antagonize the Soviet Union during the 50th anniversary of the Russian Revolution. They also felt they could not prevent her eventual kidnapping by Soviet agents in New Delhi.

Stalin's daughter is probably being supported by funds made available through CIA outlets in Europe. Eventually she will be flown to the U.S., where she will be submerged, questioned, then surfaced. That's the usual CIA procedure with defectors.
